State Income Tax Law Faces Ballot Box Test

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Nebraska voters will decide next month whether to sustain or reject the state income tax law adopted by the 1965 Legislature.

The issue will appear on the ballot as the result of a successful referendum petition drive which secured 82,132 valid signatures in 84 of Nebraska's 93 counties.

The drive, directed by Marvin Werve and Richard Herman, both of Omaha, produced 53,000 more signatures than required to force a vote on the historic tax law.

The question will be so worded on the ballot that a yes vote will sustain the act and a no vote would reject it. The issue will be numbered 300.

OK'd Or Nullified

If approved, the income tax would become effective January 1 and replace the state property tax. If rejected, the law would simply be nullified.

The flat rate proposed in the act would be applied against the net income of corporations and the net taxable income of individuals as provided in the federal income tax law.

In the case of individuals, the rate applies against income minus deductions and exemptions as reflected on Line 11d of Internal Revenue Service Form 1040.

Exemptions include $600 for an individual or $1,200 for a couple, an additional $600 for

Tireless Inez Texas Bound

Brownsville, Tex. (P)—Residents of the Gulf coast of far south Texas were braced Sunday night for what the weather bureau said would be the expected arrival early Monday of the erratic and tireless Hurricane Inez.

The vicious storm, taking at least 150 lives, has plodded more than 2,000 miles across the Caribbean Sea and deep into the Gulf of Mexico in the past 16 days.

The offshore Padre Island was virtually evacuated and hundreds of Brownsville residents moved inland while others along the coast jammed stores and service stations for necessary supplies to weather the storm.

Inez, who sideswiped southern Florida before changing her mind and swung westward into the Gulf, was about 200 miles southeast of Brownsville at 8 p.m. (CST) and moving toward the northwest at five miles an hour. She has winds of 135 miles an hour.

The weather bureau issued warnings from Tampico, Mexico, where an army official reported tides running as high as nine feet above normal Sunday night, to the Brownsville-Port Isabel area and gale warnings northward about 150 miles to Corpus Christi, Tex.

ELECTIONS—1966

Starting with the accompanying article on the income tax, and three other tax stories on Page 8, is The Star's biennial series of stories designed to help the readers know the candidates and understand the issues on which he will vote in November.

The statewide series, by veteran political writer Don Walton, will run daily for three weeks.

1. This week will be given over to articles about constitutional amendments and referendum proposals.

2. The second week will begin discussion of the candidates.

3. The third week will deal with the candidates in the big three races—for U.S. Senate, Congress in the First District, and Governor.

Following that will be articles on county candidates and the city liquor-by-the-drink issue, prepared by our county and city hall reporters.

persons over 65 or blind, and an additional $600 for each dependent as defined in the federal code.

Deductions Allowed

Base deductions are permitted for charitable contributions, medical expenses, interest payments, taxes and other miscellaneous items and adjustments.

Actual rate of the tax would be determined by the size of legislative appropriations. The rate required to finance current annual appropriations has been estimated between two and three-fourths per cent and 3%.

The tax law, chiefly sponsored by Sen. Hal Bauer of Lincoln, received 26-23 legislative approval and became law without the signature of the governor. Its enactment cracked 99 years of state government dependence on the property tax.

The act immediately ran into the referendum petition challenge which, in turn, was subjected to a court test by proponents of the law who organized as Nebraskans for Fair Taxation.

The State Supreme Court ultimately upheld the validity

Claim Method Fair

Proponents of the income tax law contend that it is a fair means of broadening the tax base, providing tax relief for property and distributing the tax load in a more equitable manner. Income, they argue, is the fairest basis for determining taxes—and the 1965 act is a fair income tax.

Supporters of the law include major farm and education organizations and the State AFL-CIO.

Lt. Gov. Philip Sorensen, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, supports the act; his opponent, Republican nominee Norbert Tiemann, opposes it.

Opponents argue that the 1965 law is neither fair nor equitable. Some would prefer a progressive rate structure; some believe the federal government has pre-empted the field with its income tax; others believe a general sales tax would be a preferable replacement for the state property tax; others prefer to continue to rely on property as the state tax base.

U.S. Hopes To Gain Indirect Touch With War Prisoners

Washington (P)—The government hopes it can gain indirect contact with U.S. war prisoners by letting an American religious group help send medical supplies to the North Vietnamese. The strategy unfolded over the weekend as the Treasury Department confirmed it has given a Yale University group permission to send $300 worth of medical goods to North Viet Nam and Viet Cong-held areas of South Viet Nam via a Canadian Quaker organization.

A Treasury official said in an interview that the Canadian Friends Service Committee has told the U.S. government it is negotiating with Hanoi and the Viet Cong for permission to dispatch observers to North Viet Nam.

The observers want to check distribution of the supplies and make contact with U.S. prisoners of war.

North Viet Nam so far has refused to discuss an exchange of war prisoners and has not let International Red Cross representatives talk with the prisoners.

There are believed to be more than 100 captured Americans in North Vietnamese hands.

The official said the State Department and Commerce Department were consulted "at adequately high levels" before the Treasury issued its license to the group of Yale religious leaders.

The Yale group plans to send money to the Canadian Friends group, which will purchase the supplies and put them aboard the Russian freighter Alexander Pushkin, which sails from Toronto Wednesday.

The official said the limited license would remain under constant review, and that no decision had been made about issuing further licenses.

He acknowledged that the license is being granted partly as an experiment to see if it might help the Canadian group win permission to contact the prisoners.

Illegitimacy Rate Serious Problem In New Zealand

Auckland, New Zealand (P)—Illegitimacy is becoming a serious problem in New Zealand, Gov. Gen. Sir Bernard Fergusson told a Marriage Guidance Council conference in Wellington Saturday.

"Last year almost one in every nine confinements produced an illegitimate child," he said. "This is twice the present figure for Australia and the United States and 50% more than the figure in Britain."

Slow Skyraider Cannons MIG21

... U.S. LEADS DOGFIGHTS, 23-5

Saigon (P)—U.S. Navy planes shot down two communist MIG21 jets 35 miles south of Hanoi Sunday and boosted to 23-5 the American edge in dogfighting over North Viet Nam. A third enemy fighter was reported winged.

The U.S. command announced the aerial victory was scored by two relatively slow, propeller-driven A1E Skyraiders and a jet F8 Crusader.

Air action dominated developments as ground fighting in South Viet Nam, marked by heavy encounters in the central and northern sectors last week, dwindled to small, scattered skirmishes.

The two MIG21s, delta-winged jets of Russian design rated at twice the speed of sound, flew to their destruction in challenging fighter-bombers attacking a bridge at Phyl Ly.

All three Red pilots may have been encouraged by the fact nobody on either side was hit in a flurry with U.S. Air Force F105 Thunderchiefs hammered Saturday. But this time it was different.

Cannon, Sidewinder

A Skyraider launched from the carrier Intrepid lined up its sights and downed one of the enemy fighters with rockets and 20mm cannon shells. The Crusader, from the carrier Oriskany, got the other with a heat-seeking Sidewinder.

A third MIG, believed to be a 21, ventured too close to another of the slow but dependable Skyraiders. A spokesman said the Skyraider pilot cut loose with cannon fire that chopped into the MIG's wing and started smoke to pouring from it. The MIG pilot hit his throttle hard and fled.

The two kills increased to 23 the number of enemy jets downed in air action over the north since the first such clash April 4, 1965.

But American losses, in all, over the north mounted to 396 planes. Spokesmen announced North Vietnamese ground fire downed a Navy Skyraider Saturday. The pilot is listed as missing.

U.S. Marines campaigning just south of the border demilitarized zone passed a milestone of sorts in their two-month old Operation

Prairie against North Vietnamese army regulars.

Find Graves

The Marines found fresh graves containing 50 enemy bodies two miles south of the zone which raised the enemy death toll above 1,000. The leathernecks now claim 1,045 North Vietnamese killed since they launched the operation Aug. 3.

McNamara In Viet Nam For Check

Saigon (P)—U.S. Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara arrived in Saigon Monday on a four-day visit and promptly began a survey of American needs in men, money and material for the war in Viet Nam.

In a brief airport statement, McNamara said he thought the visit was appropriate because nearly 12 months had passed since his last visit and U.S. strength here had more than doubled in the interval.

Asked if the United States would ever occupy the demilitarized zone with ground forces, McNamara said, "No, our objectives remain as they always have been." These, he said, are to enable the South Vietnamese government to act without fear of pressure from the North.

"We do not intend to destroy the communist regime in North Viet Nam," McNamara said.

Asked about reports that there were shortages of helicopter pilots, McNamara said "this is not the case. We have 1,800 helicopters in Viet Nam and this total exceeds all the helicopters in the Sino-Soviet bloc. We will increase them and expand the training of our pilots."

Reds Put Missiles In Populated Spots

Saigon (P)—Reconnaissance photographs show the North Vietnamese have established sites for some of their surface-to-air missiles (SAMs) within populated places, U.S. intelligence officer said Sunday.

American policy is to avoid bombing in areas—cities or hamlets—where North Vietnamese civilians might be killed or wounded in any numbers.

The Hanoi high command apparently is trying to use this policy to advantage in protecting its Soviet-built missiles.

The same thing happened after the United States began a large scale campaign in June to knock out North Viet Nam's oil storage depots. The North Vietnamese placed much of their oil in drums and dispersed many of these drums in villages.

According to the latest count, there are about 130 SAM sites. Only about 20% are reported occupied at any one time.

The North Vietnamese move their mobile launchers and radar vans about to shift defenses where necessary and to make it more difficult for U.S. planes to knock them out.

Officers say the SAMs' shooting score remains poor. Only about 20 American planes have been downed in more than 500 firings of such missiles.

Five State Nominees Answer Questions

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Five of the six nominees for the U.S. Senate, governor and the First District seat in the House answered questions Sunday night submitted by an audience of 300 at Westminster Presbyterian Church.

Republican Sen. Carl Curtis was represented by E. J. Faulkner of Lincoln. Curtis, Faulkner said, had an earlier commitment to address the Sons of Italy in Omaha.

natorial nominee; Norbert Tiemann, Republican gubernatorial nominee; Democratic Rep. Clair Callan and his opponent, Republican nominee Robert Denney.

In reply to questions: 71% On Key Issues

—Callan said that while he may have supported President Johnson's position on 92.6% of all issues voted upon in the House, he supported the President 71% on "key issues," and that is only 10% or 20% more than the average Republican congressman.

—Faulkner said Curtis is not neglecting his Senate duties by campaigning in Nebraska full-time, because he is "in constant touch" with Washington and can return immediately to vote on crucial issues.

—Sorensen said the difference in tax position between Tiemann and him is that he (Sorensen) proposes a combination sales-income tax (if the 1965 state income tax law is rejected) instead of pre-empting its adoption, and that he took this position when he filed for governor instead of "waiting until the political winds and climate were right."

—Tiemann said the University of Nebraska would not need to nearly double its budget request in one biennium to "catch up" if leadership had been provided on the state level during the last 10 years.

Favors Winning
—Denney said he does not favor expanding the war in Viet Nam, but he does favor winning it and driving the North Vietnamese Communists back over the 17th parallel.

—Morrison said he would retain his independence as a

Farmers To Allow All Access For Recreation

UNDER CROPLAND ADJUSTMENT PROGRAM

By GLENN KREUSCHER
Farm Editor

There is going to be a new welcome sign out to hunters on 382 farms in Nebraska this fall.

The sign will read, "CAP Farm—public access for hunting-hiking, fishing-trapping." It is part of the Cropland Adjustment Program, in which Nebraska farmers agree to permit public access to their farms under provisions of the new Cropland Adjustment Program (CAP), according to Hans O. Jensen, chairman of the Nebraska Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

The CAP provision offers farmers extra incentive payments for allowing the public to use designated cropland for recreational uses. Most of the payments are about $2.50 per acre.

Opens 47,000 Acres
Of 845 farms that qualified for the agreement, 382 chose to enter into the public access agreements that will open up an additional 47,000 acres of cropland to hunters this fall.

The Game Commission is cooperating in the venture. All of the cooperating CAP farms will be posted with a uniform sign. There will be one large sign located near the farm headquarters or in sight from the road. Smaller signs will outline the boundary of the area.

There can be no discrimination on who is allowed access to the land. Hunters or others using the property cannot drive on the land, but must confine their entry to hunting or hiking on foot.

ASCS spokesmen note that farmers cooperating with the plan are not liable for accidents and that destruction of property will be reported to appropriate authorities.

Mowing Asked
To make the land easier to hunt, farmer in some cases will be asked to mow several 50-foot strips on the land. Next year the planting of food

Nebraska Honey Production May Set New Record; 13% Above 1965

The 1966 Nebraska honey production is estimated at a record high of 9,215,000 pounds according to the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics. This is 13% above last year's production of 8,160,000 pounds.

The 1966 crop was produced by 97,000 colonies, which was slightly above the 96,000 colonies last year. Nebraska's average yield per colony of 95 pounds was up 10 pounds from 1965. It was the highest since 1961 when the yield was 110 pounds.

Dry weather early in the season held down production but summer rainfall promoted good growth of nectar producing plants.

Up Nationally
The national honey crop is expected to total 285 million pounds. This is three percent above both the 1965 and the 1960-64 averages. Yield is expected to average 51.7 pounds per colony compared with the yield of 50.0 last year and the 5-year average of 50.4 pounds.

The estimated production is based on 5,510,000 colonies on hand July 1, 1966, a decline of one percent from the number of colonies in 1965.

Although the U. S. average yield is above average, it fluctuates sharply by regions and even by states within regions. The North Atlantic region averaged 43.6 pounds compared with 35.7 pounds in 1965. Yields increased from 53.8 to 63.7 in the East North Central and from 78.2 to 89.8 in the West North Central.

Yields declined from 36.6 to 32.6 in the South Atlantic region. The South Central region had about the same average yield as in 1965. The Western region averaged 50.0 compared with 57.2 last year. California averaged only 36

The nation's cattlemen have invited consumers to take a close look at the books of the cattle industry.

"It may be a rude shock for the consumers when they realize that retail prices now and in recent years may have been far too low to insure them a steady supply of beef in the future," said John Guthrie of Porterville, Calif., president of the American National Cattlemen's Association.

Guthrie notes a danger to future beef supplies as many farmers and ranchers are turning to more attractive uses than cattle for their land.

"Even some of the traditional livestock ranches are dispersing herds in favor of recreational or housing development," said Guthrie.

Guthrie said the willingness of the consumer to pay fair prices covering all costs from retail to range will reverse the situation and insure adequate supplies of beef to meet future needs.

Along this line, Herschel Newsom, master of the national Grange, said on a trip to Nebraska this past week that never again would the consumer see such a cheap market basket, and that possibly the rise in agricultural prices that is necessary to assure production has waited too long.

For some time I have questioned the value of telling the consumer he has had "the best bargain in the world" on food.

The farmer doesn't especially appreciate this, as it has been done mainly at his expense. When he can't afford to do it any longer, it might cause an unhappiness on the part of that consumer to start forking over a bigger share of the paycheck for groceries.

I noticed at the State Corn-picking Contest that when Vice President Hubert Humphrey told the audience that consumers can thank the American farmer for having the best bargain in the world on food and that consumers have reaped the benefit of abundant production from the farms, there was very little applause.

A magazine published in the heart of New York City called Co-op Contact published four charts in a recent edition that compared the prices farmers receive and what the retail price is on food, bread, milk and meat.

It was a means of showing the consumer that the farmer needs more income, that he is not responsible for rising prices and that the farmer has gotten very little of recent increases in prices.

White Backlash Rising Both North, South--Poll

By LOUIS HARRIS

A white backlash against the civil rights movement is rising across America in both the North and the South. It stems from the fear whites have for their personal safety as a result of the continuing riots and from the stepped-up Negro demands for integrated housing, the sorest point in race relations.

The slogan of "black power" has become an emotional trigger among whites even more than among Negroes. Eight out of 10 white people feel that black power is hurting the cause of civil rights. They look on black power as a bid for Negro supremacy, a direct incitement to violence which is rapidly undoing much civil rights progress.

Reaction to the rioting and heightened militancy by civil rights advocates is sharper and more extreme among low income whites. Only 15% of them feel sympathetic to the Negro cause.

Low income whites are traditionally Democratic Party voters. And many of them are contemplating leaving their party in this fall's off-year elections over the issue of civil rights.

Whites tend to feel the impact of the riots in a highly personal way. A cross section of white voters was asked:

"Does the fear of racial violence make you personally feel more uneasy on the streets?"

Given this underlying fear of personal safety, the repeated militant cries of black power have given many whites the feeling that the whole civil rights movement is bent on provoking violence.

The cross section of whites was asked:
"In your opinion, do you feel that the black power slogan is helping or hurting the cause of Negro civil rights?"

When asked why they felt the black power slogan is hurting the cause, here are the main reasons volunteered by white people:

Why Black Power Hurts Negro Cause
Leads to violence
Makes me angry
Undoing all the good
Misrepresents Negro feeling
Negroes want something for nothing

LOUIS HARRIS

Whites Afraid

Hurts peaceful demonstrations
Boosts rowdy element
Proves Communists behind it

As a consequence, when whites were asked what they thought of Negro demonstrations for civil rights, the vast majority expressed an overwhelming negative reaction:

Hurts	Helps
Negro Cause	Negro Cause
October, 1966 . . . 65%	15%
June, 1966 . . . 69%	31%
June, 1963 . . . 49%	51%

White people have never been all-out in support of civil rights demonstrations, but today white backing has hit a new low. Part of this aversion can be traced to the rioting and fears of violence whites see implicit in the black power slogan.

But part must also be attributed to the change in the objectives of peaceful Negro demonstrations. Having achieved legislation which now outlaws discrimination in jobs, education and the use of public accommodations, civil rights advocates are pressing for open housing laws which will forbid discrimination in the sale or rental of living quarters.

The white majority in America is opposed to open housing legislation, and the division by upper and lower income whites is dramatic:

It is argued, of course, that Negroes want to move into precisely those neighborhoods where low income whites now reside. Upper income white neighborhoods are relatively immune from extensive integrated housing because most Negroes cannot afford to move there.

But the coalescence of Negro demands for integration in housing, along with increased tensions over rioting and cries of black power, have brought white-Negro tensions to a higher point than at any time since the Negro revolution began. And the impact at the polls next month now seems inescapable.

Color Highlights Brownville's Fall Festival

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Brownville — This Nebraska showplace had all the splash Sunday of red sumac along a golden cornfield.
From homespun parade to sprigs of bittersweet, the 10th annual fall festival was all color. Any hues which nature failed to paint on the town's famed seven hills showed up in main street displays.

At least a dozen artists tacked canvases to trees and fences — some of them next to less aesthetic campaign posters. For an estimated 5,000 visitors there were also quilt-making and fishnet-selling.

Sell Anything
"Cornob jelly has been sort of a specialty the past three or four years," beamed Mrs. Myrtle McNabb, president of the Walnut Grove Cemetery Auxiliary. "We'll sell anything, though — anything that's donated to us."
Thus, pine cones and popcorn balls were included in their conglomeration, and three shades of tomatoes: green, red and yellow. Table-dressed in a different way were the makings for rusty winter bouquets.

Even more popular than the high-ridge nature trail and Missouri river boat rides were Nemaha County apple stands. Jugs of sweet cider, sparkling like oversize jewels, were stashed in many a station wagon.

Scenery Perfect
"Even last weekend the apples and beautiful bluffs roads brought car after car into town," reflected Mrs. Robert Sage, festival chairman. "We've had just enough frost to really color the trees for today. The scenery is perfect."

Callopie and organ music added to the setting for an outdoor variety program in verdant Boettner Park. So did the marigolds and pink petunias which, seemed to border every yard.

Marvin Stephens' stagecoach was one of several vehicles showing riders the history-rich town. As usual, half a dozen homes restored to 19th century elegance were opened to sightseers.

There was, however, one bit of drab incongruity amid all the autumn gaudiness. Old-time silent movies were shown very unimaginatively — but necessarily — in outmoded black and white.

Plattsmouth Post Office Dedicated

Plattsmouth (P) — A new $120,000 post office was dedicated at Plattsmouth Sunday.

Leo Anderson, regional director of engineering and facilities for the post office, told a crew of more than 200 that new buildings are only part of a program to speed the mail at lower costs.

He said ZIP coding of letters will be one of the biggest helps, and called for residents to adopt the ZIP Code policy.

Nebraska Sugar Beet Harvest Underway

Sidney (P) —The 1966 sugar beet harvest, expected to run 18 tons per acre in the fertile North Platte Valley, was underway in Western Nebraska Sunday.

Nearly four million tons of sugar beets are expected to be delivered this fall to the 15 factories of the Great Western Sugar Co., the nation's largest beet sugar concern.

The factories are located in Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas and Nebraska.

President John Bunker of Great Western said the average yield for the five-state area is estimated above 16 tons per acre, the highest since 1963. If favorable weather continues, the sugar content of the beets is expected to be about average.

Bunker said 7,100 growers will harvest 237,500 acres of

Milo Crop Harvest Is Begun

Hastings (P) — A bumper milo harvest is underway in south central Nebraska.

Though some milo is being cut in the Hastings area, observers said full-scale operations are still a week away.

At Alma, the Co-Op elevator was reported to have taken in 80,000 bushels with a 15% average moisture content and 57 to 61.5 test weight average.

Elevator manager J. A. Van Butsel of Red Cloud estimated that this year's crop would average between 75 and 80 bushels an acre with improved quality over last year.

The Alma Co-Op Elevator reported that Virgil Sims of Huntley produced over 100 bushels an acre on dryland. Grainmen predicted even better quality and a higher yield from cutting this week.

At Red Cloud, grainmen said the quality of the grain received so far was excellent.

Bankers Plan Six Meetings

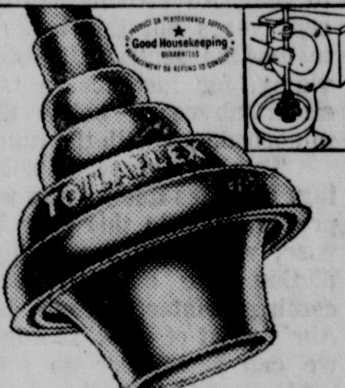

The Nebraska Bankers Association will hold six group meetings this week.

The meetings are scheduled at Sidney, Monday; North Platte, Tuesday; Fremont and Norfolk, Wednesday; Hastings, Thursday, and Lincoln, Friday.

Some Things Don't Change

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

People, things, situations—it is generally said of them that change is inevitable, that there is either progression or regression. Such is not true, however, of all things. Specifically, it is not true of the Old Farmer's Almanac, of which we have received a free complimentary copy. Thereby saving the fifty-cent purchase price, it seems only right that this 175th anniversary edition will be properly reviewed.

After all, we would hate to be taken off the advance copy list for failing to review the publication. Additionally, such reviewing is an experience we simply enjoy and would like to share with others. The marvel of The Old Farmer's Almanac is that it remains virtually the same in format and content from year to year. Advertising has been added in recent years but this is its only concession to modern society. It still persists in providing, for instance, a table for planting either above or below the ground crops in accordance with the fullness of the moon.

This, of course, is not its major offering. It prides itself on its weather calendar, prepared again this year by Abe Weatherwise, who reports a highly favorable prediction rate on last year's tables. The coming winter doesn't look good, from Abe's point of view. It might be added that we can remember no almanac in which winter looked any other way.

Almanac readers will groan with Abe's prediction that "December, January, and February will keep ploughs and shovels 'on the run.'" Almost every indication, he reports, points to a higher snowfall this winter than in either of two preceding winters. Add up the total snowfall for Abe's Boston calculations and it comes to 89 inches.

One new thing has been added to the almanac this year. Rather than each area's having to figure its own weather according to distances from Boston, there is a separate prediction for the various areas of the nation. For the Midwestern states, including Nebraska, this is the outlook: "The winter of 1966-67 (November through April) will be one of heavy snow, blizzards, and slightly warmer than the same period a year ago. On the whole, the precipitation given is the normal, as this is expected to be a normal year." Aside from mid-November flurries, the first real snow is scheduled from December 15-17 and again from December 24-26, totaling six inches on each occasion. A 10-inch snow is scheduled for February 22-25 and a blizzard for March 13-16.

In case you are wondering about what to wear on next Easter Sunday, don't be too optimistic. The date is March 26, two days after a blizzard and right in the middle of a period of thunderstorms and tornadoes. Of course, Abe advises us to give or take a day or two on things since the predictions are still pretty general, despite their localizing as to broad areas of the nation. But give or take a day around Easter and you still can't come up with anything very promising. Best bet is to hope ol' Abe misses the mark on this one.

The weather is but a beginning to all that can be found in the 1967 almanac. If you like to live by the stars or signs of the zodiac, there are several pages to help you out on this score. Being a skeptic of such things, we haven't examined the matter in much detail but can guarantee its presence in the book.

In an introductory page, the almanac editor makes one other concession to the times. "As our title implies," he writes, "this almanac is edited for 'farmers.' As the number of profitable farms has shrunk from some 20 million to around one million, we have included in our definition of 'farmer' everyone who has a garden, livestock, or even a lawn—as well as city folk who, although deprived of farm surroundings, still love the farm and all it stands for."

From an economic point of view, that seems like a wide concession to the times.

And after all, the almanac information, for the most part, should be of equal interest to all. Who knows, for instance, when he might need some good advice for treatment of a frozen nose, ear or finger? The almanac tells us to rub the frozen part of the body with snow or bathe it in cold water. Seems we remember this from our own childhood and that it was once even successfully applied to us. If still not interested, how about an accounting of the great Chicago fire of 1871?

On page 66 you can find the approximate season on alligator hunting in several southern states, as well as seasons for the more conventional fish and game pursuits. Residents of Utah will be unhappy to learn that they are destined in 1967 for a visit from the Seventeen Year Locusts. All in all, it is another welcome success for The Old Farmer's Almanac.

A Step Toward Safety

While the motivating factor may be distasteful, plans of the State Motor Vehicle Department to inaugurate a driver license re-examination and auto inspection program should receive widespread endorsement. The distasteful part is that the plans are an outgrowth of federal threats to cut down highway construction grants to Nebraska as an alternative.

As we have said previously, the federal government is wrong in forcing upon the states programs indirectly related to the aid given. Requirements for receiving aid should cover only those things having to do with the project the aid is to finance—in this case, the construction of highways.

However, the re-examination and inspection program has a lot of merit. While it will cost a substantial sum of money, other states using it have shown a marked decline in their accident and highway death rate. The program could save a number of lives annually and you can put no price tag on this.

The re-examination should weed out those people who are physically incapable of driving a car and we all see them occasionally on the streets and highways. When our reaction time begins to fail us and our sight and hearing slip, it is time for us to lay aside our car keys and employ another means of transportation.

Unfortunately, the re-examination is not likely to get to many of the careless drivers as they will be on their good behavior at the time of re-examination. But perhaps even they will be a little impressed with this new emphasis on safe driving. The program will be presented for adoption to the 1967 Legislature and is highly recommended to all senators. We should not forget that we are still killing more people on our highways than are dying on the field of battle in Viet Nam.

Cracked Up Students

A study of stress and the college student today reveals figures that should startle the average person.

In the 12 months just closing, 90,000 students seriously contemplated suicide, and 1,000 of them went through with it. A "pressure cooker" emotional atmosphere on today's college campus was described a strong contributing factor. It is making too many young people emotionally sick.

Meantime, the United States Health Service says that present day college undergraduates are the nation's highest suicide risk group. It adds that 10 per cent of the nation's 6.5 million college students have emotional problems serious enough to warrant professional care.

The "groves of academe" are no longer places of mental repose. From whence has this pressure cooker attitude sprung?

Perhaps somewhat from campus pressure. But mostly from the community we call America. We are pushing our young people too far. We have overdramatized the urgency of education. There is too much "do or die" in our approach. And we are beginning to pay the price for it. Too many youngsters are breaking under the strain.

It is true that there is a great deal more to learn than there was 30 years ago. The average college graduate of that time, if he did not remain in the field of his study, would struggle as hard to get through his freshman year now, as he struggled 30 years ago. But the pressure to succeed, which is an emotional pressure, rather than a learning pressure, is greatly more today. And he comes under that intensely before he ever opens a college text. To a student education is always a venture into the unknown, and therefore, difficult. The path should not be cluttered with emotional pressures that need not exist.

Gold And Foreign Trade

Fourteen countries, both rich and poor, have endorsed a new international money unit as a step beyond gold to further international trade. This was preliminary to a future meeting of the International Monetary Fund. While it was a favorable action it was by no means a final and decisive step. It only indicated that the world's nations may get together before the facts of life bring down the structure of international money.

What is the matter is rather simple. There is a certain amount of gold in the world that can be used as international money. It is not sufficient to sustain the constantly increasing amount of business done between the nations. And as trade continues to swell in this era of manufacturing and trade and in the light of new products constantly coming on the market the amount of gold becomes increasingly less adequate. Under such circumstances an answer is offered through devising a new unit of money in sufficient amount to sustain growing trade. Or there are other answers, one of them being to slow down trade to a point that the gold supply will be adequate, or let things go bust. But here human perversity enters.

Each nation is for itself. Europe especially likes gold and continues to build reserves of it at the expense of the supply for trade. It is difficult to think up a satisfactory substitute. So here we stand with a crisis approaching. The past seems to offer no learnable lessons. After World War I France set forth on a policy of building a huge gold reserve. It did not work.

During the depression the United States finally got more than 70 billion of gold reserves. We buried it in Fort Knox and gained little good from it.

It is trade rather than gold that is the prime necessity. This is an obvious fact which is very, very hard to learn.

"It's More Than We've Ever Put Out Before"

DREW PEARSON

Clinton, Tennessee, Sets Right Pattern

WASHINGTON — Eight years ago this week, the people of Clinton, Tenn., were awakened at 3 a.m. by a succession of dynamite blasts, to find their schoolhouse blown apart by a hate bomber.

Strong men wept as they looked down at the shattered walls, the splintered desks, the broken glass, the warped lockers in which children once put their lunch boxes.

But these men began rebuilding. And in one year, with the help of children all over the nation who contributed nickels and dimes to buy bricks to combat bombs of bigotry, a new schoolhouse was underway in Clinton. I have been there since. Hate is forgotten. White and Negro children study together side by side.

The Clinton schoolhouse, it seems to me, can be a lesson to San Francisco, Cicero, Atlanta and other cities where hate and bullets and bloodshed have torn communities asunder. These are bigger cities and their troubles have festered longer, so the rebuilding will be more complicated. But as in Clinton, Tenn., it can be done.

The problem at Clinton was complicated by fear—fear of white bigots. R. G. Crossno, chairman of the school board and a dairyman, had his milk business boycotted. Nevertheless, he led in the decision that the school must obey court rulings.

Leading Tennessee politicians were reluctant eight years ago to serve on a committee to rebuild the school. They were fearful—fearful of white political retaliation.

The problem was also complicated by rabble-rousing John Kasper, a racial piper, who came to Clinton to stir up prejudice. It was he who indirectly inspired the midnight bomber.

Today the nation's No. 1 rabble-rouser is a young Jamaican Negro, Stokely Carmichael, whose "black power" slogan has ignited black big-city crowds to demand more, and cause one-time congressional champions to vote for less.

The extremism of John Kasper and Stokely Carmichael, ten years apart, has helped touch off the troubles of 1956-58 and 1965-66.

But when you get away from these rabble-rousers, away from the uneducated and the biased of both races, you find a great reservoir of goodwill. The schoolchildren of California gave up their lunch money to help rebuild the schoolhouse in Tennessee. And I am sure the schoolchildren of Tennessee would help the children of Watts and San Francisco if the problem could be divorced from rabble-rousing and violence.

MARQUIS CHILDS

Ike In Big Switch On Asian War Line

WASHINGTON — Emerging from his retirement, or more accurately semi-retirement, General Eisenhower has been projected into the election campaign. He threw his great weight in the balance of the most inflammatory of all issues—win the Viet Nam war and do not rule out the use of nuclear weapons. The consequences are incalculable not just for election day but for the perilous months beyond as the American commitment constantly grows.

When the general first ran for President in 1952 this country was in a war in Korea. Following the massive Chinese intervention in late 1950 American casualties had gone well over the hundred thousand mark. It was a war unpopular, frustrating, baffling as is the conflict in Viet Nam today.

While Eisenhower, like other candidates for public office, managed at one time or another in the campaign to say almost everything on every side of every question, his principal thrust was as the champion of peace. He sounded often, and particularly in Republican territory in the Midwest, like an old-fashioned isolationist. Here culled from the record and contrasting so markedly with what he is saying today are some of his statements as he moved across the country in September and October 14 years ago.

We should be keeping our boys at home and not preparing them to serve in uniforms across the ocean. —Newton, Iowa, Sept. 18 We must take our boys away from the front lines.

—Richmond, Calif., Oct. 8

Now some people have advocated: 'Well, let's go and fight China.' No one yet, no one that I know of, has presented any feasible military plan for attacking China. It is not a country particularly susceptible to weakening through massive bombing, a place where we could presumably have a greater advantage than anyone else. Because why? It doesn't have the great centers like Gary, Detroit, Pittsburgh, and the great manufacturing centers that we do. It is a great mass of people.

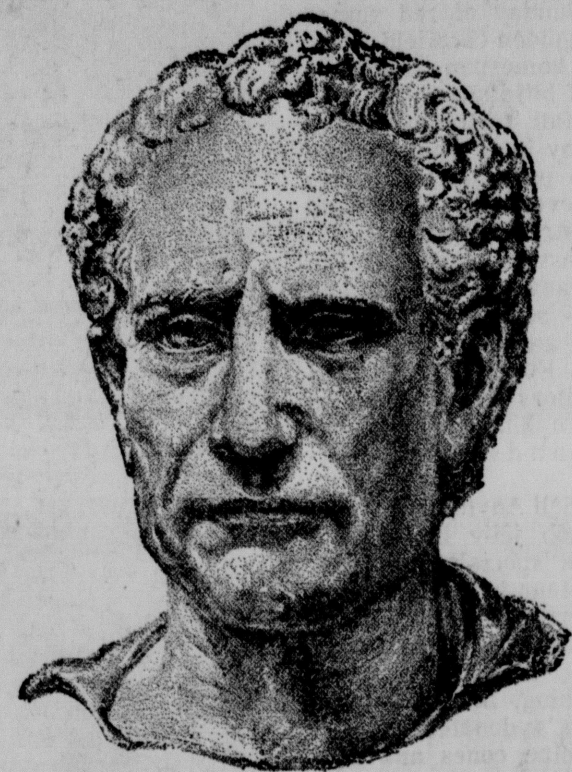

—Interview in September, U.S. News and World Report

The general's declaration toward the close of the campaign that he would go to Korea was credited as much as any single factor with his landslide victory over Adlai Stevenson. President-elect Eisenhower went to Korea before his inauguration. Not long after becoming president he initiated the moves resulting in the armistice signed July 27, 1953. Eisenhower's image was established as a man of peace and the Republicans exploited this in later elections with denunciation of the "three Democrat wars" and the arithmetic of the casualties in those wars. In 1954 President Eisenhower rejected a plea by the Joint Chiefs of Staff to intervene in Viet Nam to save the French from defeat.

EMPEDOCLES

Profiles In Science

Empedocles was born in Sicily about 500 B.C. He was a member of a well-to-do family and was educated and trained to fill a certain position in society—that of a gentleman.

The Greeks of Sicily were so struck by his proud bearing, his knowledge and wisdom, that they asked him to rule them as their king. He refused gently, advising them to shun dictatorships and to put their trust in democracy.

Empedocles was one of the first advocates of what we know today as the "theory of evolution."

He divided everything in the world into four elements—water, fire, earth and air—believing that they had arranged themselves either inadvertently or with the aid of a prime mover into all the things we know today. However, these arrangements did not happen all at once.

Everything that exists is the product of something that existed before and is the result of the four elements working upon each other. These changes go on in a universal rhythm never stopping and never slowing down but going inexorably forward.

According to Empedocles' concept, first there was a phase of evolution succeeded by a phase of dissolution. There is disagreement with this theory but most thinkers accept the idea that things are always growing in ways that are considered beneficial by some standards and harmful by others.

Empedocles believed that all living and inorganic things are assemblies of atoms. To explain why these arrangements are constantly being built and torn down, he apparently used love and hate, imputing to things that feel no emotions. Upon analysis this is not so foolish as it sounds.

For instance, Empedocles' ideas that atoms could love and hate have been interpreted to mean that they feel "at home" in some situations and "uncomfortable" in others.

This in turn is resolved to the idea that when things find themselves in beneficial or comfortable surroundings they tend to survive, strengthen and develop; whereas things in unfavorable surroundings tend to get weaker and disappear. Combinations of atoms that suit each other last while unsuited ones die.

This explains evolution almost as well as Darwin's "survival of the fittest." We know that thousands of mutations are caused by cosmic rays and other radiation but that only a few survive. The reason the others do not is that they are unworkable and "unfit."

NASON ON EDUCATION

Leisure Use Also Requires Education

By DR. LESLIE J. NASON

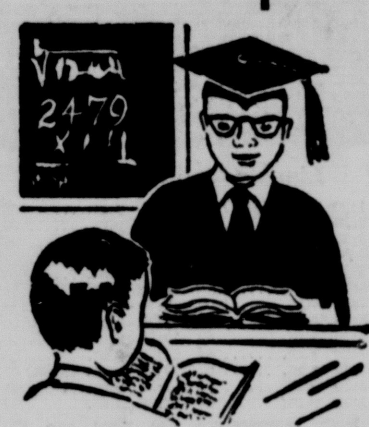

Should we be educated on how to enjoy our leisure time? Most definitely—yes!

Persons who lack the skills to fit successfully into the work world usually also lack the skills which would propel them into interesting and worthwhile leisure activities.

Automation and technical advances often force leisure upon those who are least prepared to make good use of it and to enjoy it.

Our old ideas of leisure-time activities must be revised. We need more than time to read or to play. One must have a desire to read about something and to add to his knowledge. Even reading just to enjoy a clever use of words demands a rather specialized background and experience in word usage.

In pioneer days, hunting and fishing were available to the entire population if they so desired. The undeveloped areas were wide expanses in comparison to the populated ones. Now this is rapidly being reversed. The world is becoming a crowded planet.

Music, painting, sculpture and poetry have always been leisure-time activities of those skilled in these arts and able to afford them.

To successfully use leisure time, every individual must learn to live happily with himself. Parents and schools must help children develop into men and women interested in, and capable of, self-development coupled with a desire to be of service to family and community. Ideally, they should be able to read with sufficient ease to make some use of this avenue for increasing their knowledge and enjoyment.

They should have been exposed and have learned to appreciate and enjoy listening to music. Producing music on their own could be a leisure activity for many more individuals.

In educating people for the worthy use of increased leisure, the idea of the joy to be gained through helping others should be stressed.

For example, the mother who devises a new menu for the pleasure of the family, revises some portion of the home, or does any one of the many things that mothers do to make life in the home more pleasant, is making a worthy use of leisure time. She gets satisfaction from these activities.

One has but to help one underachieving child to become an achiever to understand the joy that he, himself, receives out of this most worthy use of leisure time.

As people strive to learn, and as they aspire to live in a better house on a better street, and to give their children a better heritage, their leisure activities must be constructive.

Abel Fire

Lincoln, Neb.

Please give Abel a chance to prove itself. The Page One article in the Oct. 3 Star was a gross misrepresentation of Sunday night's fire.

Here are the facts: (1) a fire was spotted in the trash chutes; (2) a group of responsible students turned in the alarm; (3) the alarm was verified and by the time the evacuation order was given, there was no doubt in anyone's mind that the fire was real. Evacuation of the building was orderly—there was absolutely no sign of panic among the residents. Furthermore, realizing that it was real, there were several students who without being told took it upon themselves to make sure that everybody in every room had cleared the premises. After this was done, then and only then did these students leave.

After all the residents were out of the building, they gathered in groups, talked, sang, and, yes, even cheered. In effect, they did just about anything they could think of to keep themselves occupied without causing trouble.

As for The Star's mention of a "raid" on the nearby women's dorm—it must be granted that many of the residents did head for Sandoz Hall and upon their arrival, they went into the lobby and watched television.

No matter what may have been the cause of the fire—and it may have been spontaneous combustion in a clogged trash chute—we certainly do feel that the Abel residents should be commended for their responsible reactions to a potentially hazardous situation.

Only A Game

Omaha, Neb.

I don't anticipate that coaches will sit in the stands during the game, and I know they can't suit up, but why do some coaches call so many plays from the bench? If I had confidence in Mr. Bob Churchill, I would turn him loose and let the chips fall where they will. Once the game begins, let the players utilize the talent which the coaches have developed during practice.

In college football, the quarterback should be boss during the game, or else the coach should substitute himself. After all, it is only a game.

Rock Stalemate Likely Between Britain, Spain

London (AP) — Britain is ready for a showdown with Spain in the dispute over Gibraltar when they resume talks about the rock Monday.

Britain has challenged the Franco regime to put the issue before the International Court in the Hague in tones bordering on an ultimatum. The veiled threat to Madrid was either accept the proposal or the talks may be broken off.

The likely outcome: Stalemate.

Britain rules Gibraltar now as a colony and the proud Spanish are demanding that sovereignty be handed over to them.

Physically at issue is very little—a barren 1,400-foot-high promontory three miles long and three-quarters of a mile wide, joined to the southwest coast of Spain by a low-lying strip of land.

Ceded In 1713

Since 1713, when Spain first ceded the rock to Britain, it has been used as a powerful fortress commanding the entrance to the Mediterranean. Its strategic importance made it of great value in World

Wars I and II, but its military role is on the wane.

Nevertheless, the British hold it a point of honor to keep sovereignty over the rock.

The 25,000 Gibraltarians are descendants of workmen brought in by the British over the last 250 years. The resident Spanish population is a mere handful. Though Spanish is the common tongue and the locals eat fiery piellas, they want no part of Spain's political system.

Spain, rankled at being the only European power with a foreign colony on its soil, has moved toward an economic blockade and psychological warfare in its campaign to regain the rock.

The British, confident they have legality on their side, put the next move up to the Franco regime in proposing that the dispute be handed by the International Court. Even if the Spanish agree to this—and they have indicated they won't—the court's ponderous procedures could delay a verdict for years.

Spain Blockades

In the meantime, the Spaniards have stepped up their economic blockade of the rock to the point where it is virtually isolated. Last week Madrid decreed that no merchandise, automobiles or tax- is should pass between Spain and Gibraltar. The bulk of Gibraltar's supplies hitherto passed through Spain.

The British are planning a massive operation to keep the rock fed by sea.

Britain feels it has the weight of sufficient legal documents behind it to sink any Spanish arguments at the World Court on ownership. Gibraltar was first captured by British forces in 1704 during the War of Spanish Succession. In 1713 Spain ceded it to Britain "in full and entire propriety to be held and enjoyed absolutely with all manner of rights forever."

Spain doesn't dispute this. But it argues that Britain, by giving almost complete internal self-rule to Gibraltar in 1964, relinquished sovereignty. And when that happened, the Spanish maintain, the 1713 treaty stipulated that Spain be given the first offer to run the rock. British spokesmen say the Gibraltarians are on record as wanting to stay British-oriented.

Activities Cause Party Expulsion

Tokyo (AP) — The Japan Communist party announced Sunday the expulsion of four more Peking-aligned members for "antiparty activities."

The announcement, made by the party organ Akahata (Red Flag), is an aftermath of the party's decision to disassociate itself from Peking's hard line and achieve independence in the international communist movement.

Leaders Gambling On Election Fever

... TO SPEED ADJOURNMENT OVER JAM OF BILLS

Washington (AP) — Congressional leaders gambled Sunday that a burning fever to adjourn will help them plow through a massive jam of controversial legislation this week.

With all 435 seats in the House and 35 Senate places at stake in the November elections, pressure for winding up the current session is explosive.

Key Test

A key test comes in the Senate soon after it meets Monday on the motion of majority leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., to limit debate and vote on a last-ditch effort to provide self-rule for citizens of the District of Columbia.

A token Senate session for 21 seconds Saturday was held to permit the Monday showdown on this old controversy. Sen. Wayne Morse D-Ore., offered the local government plan for the nation's capital as a rider to a $4.46 billion higher education federal aid bill. The voteless District of Columbia, now populated by a heavy Negro majority, is governed by a commission appointed by the President with Congress serving as a sort of a city council.

Mansfield and Morse must muster a two-thirds majority of senators present to impose the gag rule and thus thwart the usual filibuster against the home rule effort.

The Senate has voted for district home rule plans six times in recent years only to have them rejected or nullified by the House.

Unusual Test

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill., joined Mansfield and Morse in the unusual parliamentary test.

If the Senate fails to limit debate on the home rule rider, Mansfield has promised to table and thus kill the proposal for this session.

Mansfield still clings to hope that Congress can adjourn sometime next midweek but House speaker John McCormack, D-Mass., indicates that the following Saturday, Oct. 22, is more realistic.

Senate and House leaders plan to huddle Monday on adjournment schedules. Among other things some 25 bills, awaiting Senate-House compromises which must be approved by both ends of Congress, threatened their plans.

Minor Bills

House leaders listed minor bills for Monday action with three disputed pieces of legislation to follow.

First of these is the long controversy over establishing a national park and recreational area in the Indiana dunes. Industrial, recreational and regional conflicts are involved.

Next the House will tackle a bill from its Un-American Activities Committee proposing drastic penalties against "over acts" during a period of hostilities by persons in this country.

It is aimed at Viet Nam war protests and such actions as sending aid to the Viet Cong. Passage, after some angry debate, appeared likely.

Later in the week the House will consider President Johnson's "demonstration cities" proposal which won senate approval in modified form earlier in the session.

It is a major item in the administration's Great Society blueprint and could involve billions of dollars of future federal spending.

Appropriations

Senate action during the week will include a $986.5 billion military construction fund and annual appropriations for the State, Justice and Commerce Department and the District of Columbia.

The Senate appropriations committee cut more than $2 million from military construction funds approved by the House. It has yet to act on the $2.3 billion fund for

State, Commerce and Justice or the $381 billion for the district allowed by the House.

Also listed for Senate action are two House-passed tax measures. One would suspend the investment credit for business in an anti-inflation effort. The other would revise foreign investment taxes in an attempt to reduce the gold drain and balance of payments deficit.

The tax-writing Senate Finance Committee has tacked scores of amendments on the second bill.

Two more bills authorizing federal aid for education also are awaiting Senate action.

Police Disarmed By Negro Crowd

Tampa, Fla. (AP) — A crowd of about 300 Negroes disarmed two police officers early Sunday when they tried to break up a fight between two Negroes brawling on the sidewalk.

Police reinforcements, called by the officers on a walkie-talkie radio before the Negroes took it away, fired shots into the air and the crowd dispersed.

Three Negroes were arrested.

Johnson Faces Demonstrations

... IN NEW ZEALAND

Wellington, New Zealand (P) — University students plan massive demonstrations in Wellington during President Johnson's visit Oct. 19-20.

A spokesman for the Students' Association at Victoria University, Wellington, was quoted by the Sunday News as saying: "We will picket him everywhere. We will make him aware of our opposition to the war."

The chairman of an organization known as the Committee on Viet Nam, Barry Metcalfe, of Wellington, who organized previous anti-Viet Nam demonstrations, including some during the visit of Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey in February, hinted that strongarm men from his committee will help security agents guard Johnson — unofficially.

"We are certainly going to demonstrate about U.S. policy in Viet Nam, but in an orderly fashion," said Metcalfe. "We will take strong action against anybody who tries to stir up violence."

'Peace Swindle'

Tokyo (P) — Hanoi's official Viet Nam news agency charged President Johnson's forthcoming trip to Asia is another step to stage a "peace swindle in Asia."

VNA, in a broadcast monitored here, commented on Johnson's forthcoming trip to the Philippines for a seven-nation Viet Nam conference and to four other friendly nations — New Zealand, Australia, Malaysia, Thailand, and South Korea. It said:

"Johnson on the one hand claimed that the Manila conference is aimed to discuss prospects for a peaceful solution to the Viet Nam conflict, but on the other disclosed that his coming Asian tour has no other aim than to push its war escalation policy in Viet Nam.

"At the press conference Thursday Johnson declared he would make an all round review of the military situation in Viet Nam at the Manila conference, and stressed that the U.S. did not want to 'surrender or withdraw' from Viet Nam and Asia.

"Meanwhile, as disclosed by New York Times on Oct. 4, U.S. Defense Secretary (Robert S.) McNamara, who was scheduled to arrive in Saigon would examine on the spot the request for dispatching 75,000 more American troops to South Viet Nam in spring 1967 and to bring the Viet Nam war to a turning point in mid-November this year."

Not Political

Casberra, Australia (P) — Presidential Press Secretary Bill D. Moyers denied there were any political implications involved in President Johnson's forthcoming visit to Australia and New Zealand.

He was speaking at a news conference at the American Embassy following a meeting with Australian government officials on the itinerary for the President's Australian visit. Asked about his reactions to criticisms that Johnson's visit now could help the Australian and New Zealand governments in their approaching election campaigns, Moyers replied:

"There is nothing that a President or prime minister does that does not attract criticism from one quarter or another. The President is not coming to Australia for political purposes, he is making the visit because he has had a long-standing invitation.

Supreme Court May Again Decide Controversial Church-State Issues

Washington (P) — The Supreme Court may decide Monday to step again into the mined field of church-state relations by taking on a Maryland case of historic proportions.

No stranger to such controversy, the court is being asked to pass on the constitutionality of tax exemptions for houses of worship and church-owned property.

The case has been on the court docket since May 13. A decision on whether to hear it is expected soon, possibly Monday — which is the first decision day of the term which began last Monday.

Also on the docket, since Aug. 24, is another landmark church-state suit. This one questions the use of public funds for church-related schools. Again, before long, the justices are expected to decide whether to review.

Together, the two cases give the court a new opportunity to interpret the First Amendment and the separation of church and state, which stems historically from the constitutional declaration that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

In June, 1962 the court stepped into a storm by ruling that the amendment bars state officials from composing an official prayer and requiring its recital in public schools at the beginning of each school day. This involved a New York practice.

The storm grew the following June when the court struck down Baltimore, Md., and Pennsylvania provisions that the Bible be read or the Lord's Prayer said the opening of the school day.

Under Criticism
A similar reading of the First Amendment in the cases at hand likely would subject Chief Justice Earl Warren and the eight associate justices to similar criticism.

Madelyn E. Murray O'Hair, who instituted the 1963 Maryland prayer cases, is among those asking the high court to reverse the Maryland Court of Appeals on tax exemptions for houses of worship.

The Maryland court held last Feb. 14 that the exemptions do not violate the Maryland or U.S. Constitutions and said the exemptions are a recognition of the contributions made by religious organizations to the general public welfare.

Among the arguments raised by Mrs. O'Hair and the others are that the exemptions amount to public aid to religious institutions in violation of the First Amendment and result in higher real estate taxes.

Maryland officials have asked the court not to hear the appeal. In papers filed with the tribunal last June, they said:

"Constitutional or statutory tax exemptions for houses of worship and other property of religious organizations exist in every state of the union and in the District of Columbia."

Not one, they said, has ever been set aside as invalid under the U.S. Constitution though the question has been raised from time to time in both state and federal courts.

Besides, the Maryland officials contend, the First Amendment prohibits "active state promotion of religion" not exemptions "to encourage or foster the public good."

In the second case it is the Maryland officials who are seeking high court review.

Here the Maryland Court of Appeals, in a 4-3 decision last June 2, barred state grants to three church-affiliated liberal arts colleges for the construction of science buildings and a dining hall. The court held the colleges are so closely affiliated with religious denominations as to be "sectarian" in nature. Thus, the majority said, the grants were barred under the U.S. Constitution.

A fourth grant was upheld with the reasoning that the college's ties to a church were loose and its staff and student body diverse.

Though the case deals specifically with Maryland grants, its possible implications are broad and novel.

The Association of American Colleges, in asking the court last month to hear Maryland's appeal, said, "the constitutional validity of many, if not all, of the various federal programs aiding higher education 'is at issue' as a result of the court of appeals decision."

Jewish Congress
At the end of June, the American Jewish Congress found in a survey that 420 enrolled now and has had about 200 come and go without graduating.

He said the center, which opened in June of 1965, has had 219 graduates, has 420 enrolled now and has had about 200 come and go without graduating.

Scodius said Omaha's 12-month cost is $6,720 but the average girl stays only from eight to 10 months. He said Burroughs hopes the stay will be cut to six or eight months.

Omaha Job Corps Costs $560 A Girl

Omaha (P) — The director of logistics and administration at the Omaha Women's Job Corps Center, Victor Scodius, says the Burroughs Corporation is spending $560 a month for each girl at the center.

He said it is hoped the figure will be lowered to $450 within a year.

He said the figure covers such items as food, education, clothing, medical and dental treatment and recreation. It does not include such one-time costs as building remodeling.

Transportation and other expenses before the girls arrive and after they leave Omaha are borne by the Office of Economic Opportunity. Scodius said he could not estimate how much O-E-O spends per girl.

After O-E-O officials testified that costs in the last year exceeded $9,000 per enrollee, Congress recently set a maximum of $7,500 per Job Corps enrollee.

Every night a couple of hundred tourists sit down at medieval wooden tables in the torchlit hall of Bunratty Castle and live the life of a lord.

Lords lived very high on the hog. They lived on "braune brose" and "sew lom-barde." On "salomene" and "che-kyn's in Browet" and "syllabubs" and "trayne roste."

The medieval dinner at Bunratty has become a very big thing since the old, crumbling castle was restored. And everybody comes to eat with their fingers. And drink mead from a posset cup. And hear Irish laments on an Irish harp.

Bunratty Castle stands on the Ennis-Limerick road near Shannon Airport. The Vikings fortified the place. The Norman, Thomas de Clare, had an O'Brien "pulled asunder by strong steeds" in the courtyard.

The O'Briens wound up owning it. (And burnt a pair of McNamara's here to teach them a lesson.)

The floors have fallen in. But the great tower with the arrow slits stood firm. So they rebuilt the inside the way it used to be.

The dinners are of olden days. You eat with your fingers and cut with a dagger and drink your soup from the bowl.

Lovely serving wenches fill your cup with mulled wine. "It's been a great success," said Brendan O'Regan—he lives down here and was the one who rebuilt Bunratty at no profit but for the love of it.

The land is filled with these tower castles. Filled with history of bloodshed and murder, treachery and conquest.

I went over to Pogue Castle at Na Pogue—"the Hill of the Kiss."

"We can't restore them all," said Brendan. "But it was my thought to restore this enough to have a museum here."

He has a very funny idea. "It occurred to me," said Brendan, "to fix up one room the tourists would be peering into accidentally like. It would be completely in the period. And in the time, playing a harp."

"When the tourists went back to the bus, they'd mention it. And all the bus drivers

"Inside the hall," said Brendan, "the acting Lord rose and said: 'We hope it will be all right with our friend. But I'll ask you all to stand a moment in silent prayer for him.' And as they stood and prayed, he died."

Science Shrinks Piles New Way Without Surgery Stops Itch—Relieves Pain

New York, N.Y. (Special) — For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids, stop itching, and relieve pain — without surgery.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by a doctor's observations. Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all — this improvement was maintained in cases where a doctor's observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such astonishing statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®) — the discovery of a world-famous research institution. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H®. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug counters.

Prosecutors Probing Subandrio's Fund Use

Jakarta, Indonesia (P) — Prosecutors in the trial of former Foreign Minister Subandrio questioned him and state witnesses in detail Sunday night on the use of $500,000 in state funds.

Subandrio and the others testified the funds were used for the Indonesian central intelligence organization which Subandrio headed. The money was split between two banks, in Zurich and Tokyo, and could be drawn only by Subandrio.

The witnesses and prosecution confirmed, however, that nearly all the funds still are in the government hands.

President Sukarno's name did not come up at all in the testimony, as it has regularly in the previous sessions. Subandrio is being tried on charges of treason, subversion and corruption.

Personal Money
One witness testified he issued checks for Subandrio of $10,000 for each of his trips abroad and none of the money was returned. It was treated as his personal money, the witness said.

Subandrio's trial, already running for a week, is expected to end in a few days. The testimony thus far has dwelt heavily on Subandrio's connection with the Communist Party and his movements prior to the communist coup attempt last October. The testimony also involved Sukarno, linking him through a letter from Communist Party chief D. N. Aidit with the abortive coup.

Sukarno issued a statement, which was read in court Saturday, that he knew nothing about the plans for the coup.

Two army officers charged with involvement in the abortive uprising are on trial at Medan, in North Sumatra.

The prosecution said that, as part of the communist power play, the two officers had distributed a letter stating the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency was financing plans for an army coup and that the U.S. 7th Fleet would take a hand.

Students' Leader
In other developments: —Cosmas Batubara, chairman of the student action fronts in Jakarta, declared before a youthful crowd that bullets would not stop student demands. He referred to military intervention last week against a march on Sukarno's palace. Students were roughed up and prodded with bayonets. But the chief of the special forces troops in the capital, Brig. Gen. Sarwoeche, told the same gathering that equal partnership does not mean the students can act as they wish.

—Leaders from central Java, meeting in Semarang, issued resolutions calling for severance of relations with Kees China and demanding that Sukarno explain his stand toward communism.

—On the other hand, chairman of the Indonesian Nationalist Party for central and eastern Java joined in a declaration that any effort to topple Sukarno would bring a reaction from that party.

Irish Farmers March
Cork, Ireland (UPI) — Angry Irish farmers began an 11-day march on Dublin to protest against falling incomes. At the end of their 220-mile trek they planned to present a petition to Agriculture Minister Charles Haughey. About 20 men will complete the march, but they will be joined at all stages of their route by local farmers, according to a spokesman for the National Farmer's Association.

Creighton Volunteers Aid Omaha Youth Programs

Omaha (P) — State and city officials have enlisted the aid of 13 volunteers from Creighton University in a training program which it is hoped will solve one of the problems facing Omaha War on Poverty youth programs.

The officials have been unable to fill quotas for the men's Job Corps or the city's Neighborhood Youth Corps.

The Creighton volunteers have started a series of courses on how to find unemployed youths and get them interested in applying. The volunteers will go door-to-door in poverty neighborhoods when they complete several weeks of instruction.

The city received a $216,000 grant in August for a Neighborhood Youth Corps. Officials have been able to fill 40 of 100 openings.

The city also has been hard-

THE SPICE

of life in the suburban areas is activity

The past two weekends attest to the fact that Lincoln residents are loved for themselves — not for the Cornhusker football squad. Even though the Huskers haven't been at home for two weeks, houseguests and visitors have filled suburban homes.

WEDGEWOOD MANOR

A dinner party Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Shephard was given in honor of Joseph Bosch of Washington, D.C. Mr. Bosch was the Shephard's houseguest last week. Six neighborhood couples were invited to the affair.

No one threw stones but the six Colorado College rooters weren't very popular at the Wesleyan football game Friday night. The alumni attending were Mr. and Mrs. Allan Ives, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mientka and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kirk.

After the Wesleyan victory the sixsome returned to the Kirk home for a post-game seminar.

En route to their home in Denver, from a Chicago business meeting Mr. and Mrs. Tim Evenson made a weekend stop in Lincoln Saturday and Sunday. During their brief stay they were the houseguests of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Johnson.

EASTMONT

The population of the Donald Hamilton home exploded with seven additional members Sunday afternoon when Young Kim Hamilton celebrated her 11th birthday. Kim and her feminine friends spent the anniversary hours in a treasure hunt, plus the traditional cake and ice cream.

Guests were Beth Ballew, Mike Tuck, Prissy Hicks, Nancy Smock, Wendy Mayfield, Jody Ebers and Terri Rose.

THE KNOLLS

Mrs. Kaer P. Vanice III is planning a Wednesday luncheon at the Lincoln Country Club this week. Mrs. Vanice will entertain her bridge group in honor of a Lincoln visitor, Mrs. Fred Johnston of Denver, Colo.

LINCOLN HEIGHTS

Tuesday morning Mrs. Kenneth Niedan entertained at her home to introduce politics into the usual social activities. Guest speaker for the coffee was Mrs. Carol Walker who is running for county office in November.

EASTBOROUGH

We don't know what Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Schamp had on the agenda for this weekend, but activity at the Schamp home during the past two weekends has been phenomenal.

The last week in September, Mr. and Mrs. Schamp flew to Las Vegas, Nev., to visit with Mr. and Mrs. Donald Schamp, and their children, Doug, Greg and Susie.

When the Lincoln travelers arrived home last weekend they were met by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Schamp, Jr. and their two sons, Dennis and Dwayne, of Oak Harbor, Wash. The junior Schamps were in Lincoln visiting friends and relatives before departing for a Naval station in Hawaii.

After visiting in Lincoln, Mr. and Mrs. Schamp Jr. will make visits in Las Vegas and Long Beach, Calif.

NORTHEAST HEIGHTS

Arriving Friday night to be the weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Graesser and their daughters, Marie, Louise and Gwen, were Mrs. Graesser's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Offutt of Liberty, Mo. Mr. and Mrs. Offutt, incidentally, are observing their 58th wedding anniversary this evening at a family celebration.

SUNDAY

party complimented bride-elect

One of the festive Sunday afternoon affairs was the party and miscellaneous shower for which Miss Nancy Cowles was hostess at her home when she paid courtesy to Miss Nancy Baker.

The party yesterday was the first in what probably will be a long list of courtesies for Miss Baker whose marriage to David Koch will take place on Dec. 17—But Miss Cowles made her plans especially early because she leaves on Tuesday for her Peace Corps assignment in Chile.

South West North East
1 ♠ Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead — king of spades.

This hand was dealt many years ago in a rubber bridge game. There is no record of the participants in the deal, but, even if there were, it is doubtful that the victims of the holocaust would relish the publicity.

South was apparently a believer in light opening bids, but, even so, he might have considered it more expedient to open with a club than a heart.

But he did bid a heart, which West doubled. East made an inspired pass, thus converting the takeout double into a business double.

Not only the bidding, but also the play, was inspired. West, with no clearly indicated opening lead, ventured the king of spades. East applauded the lead by signaling with the nine, and West continued with a spade to the ace.

Biding his time, East returned a diamond rather than a spade. He was out to kill declarer and he decided that the best weapon for this purpose was a diamond return.

South erred by playing low and West took the trick with the king. West returned a diamond which East ruffed.

East led back the seven of spades, which South ruffed with the six and West over-ruffed with the nine. East then trumped the diamond return and led another spade, South ruffing with the eight and West with the ten.

Continuing the lethal defense, West played a low club to the king. East returned a club, West taking the trick with the ten and continuing with the ace and another club. Dummy ruffed and East overruffed.

By now eleven tricks had been played and South had lost them all. East had the A-7 of hearts left and led the seven. South, who had the K-J, played the jack, which lost to the queen. The ace of hearts then provided trick number thirteen for the defense. Down 2,000.

The defenders had pitched a shutout!

ABBY

do what is best for you
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: After eight years of marriage, I decided to get a divorce. I had two children and would have stayed married for their sakes, but their father cared nothing for them, so it would have been pointless. Two years later I married a widower with three children. In six months I realized that I had made another terrible mistake. All he wanted was a cook, housekeeper and someone to raise his children.

He favored HIS children and accused me of favoring mine. (Actually, I bent over backwards so far trying to be fair to his, I was unfair to my own.) My problem is that I am miserable but if I get another divorce everyone will say BOTH divorces were my fault. I am 30 years old and don't want to be a two-time loser. If it weren't for my children, I would commit suicide.

DEAR TRAPPED: The people who talk don't help you to bear the burden of your misery. Do what is best for you and your children and forget everything else.

DEAR ABBY: I was married 10 years ago and now have three children. Two years ago I found my birth certificate and discovered that my mother's maiden name was on it, not her married name, which means she had me before she was married.

This has been bothering me for a long time. I want my children to be legitimate. Are they or aren't they? I don't know who to ask without a lot of embarrassment.

DEAR WORRIED: Your children are legitimate even though YOU may have been born out of wedlock.

DEAR ABBY: I am being married soon and would like very much to have my brother be an usher at my wedding, but my fiancé told me that he has already chosen his ushers and he isn't planning on having my brother. He will give me no reason other than he wants his "friends."

Abby, I asked a cousin of his to be a bridesmaid, and she is no close friend of mine, but I thought it would please him. My brother feels very hurt about this and my parents are upset. Please give me a suggestion on how I can tactfully solve this problem?

OHIO BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: Technically the groom selects whom-ever he wishes for his ushers, but since it has now become an issue, it would be both wise and generous for him to include your brother, knowing that if he doesn't, ill feelings will prevail.

301 Would Prohibit State Property Tax

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Constitutional Amendment 301, proposed by initiative petitions sponsored by the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation, would prohibit the state from levying a property tax.

The amendment would, in effect, repeal the Duis Amendment which now bars the state from the property tax field only upon the adoption of a general sales or income tax, or a combination of the two.

If the proposal is adopted by the voters, it would force the 1967 Legislature to use either a general sales tax, an income tax, or both, to support state government operations.

Current state property tax levy is 10.67 mills.

99 Years

The property tax has funded operations of state government for Nebraska's 99 years of statehood. It now raises some $46 million in annual state revenue.

Proponents of the amendment argue that property carries more than its share of the tax load by supporting state, county, city and school district operations.

A broadening of the tax base — utilizing a sales or income tax to support state government, combined with the possibility of a program of state aid to education which would reduce the local school district property tax levy — would be more fair to all taxpayers, it is contended.

Opponents of the measure argue against placing a flat prohibition against a state property tax in the constitution, thus forever (or until the constitution were again amended; limiting legislative tax alternatives.

Opposition is also expressed to completely removing the state from direct interest in property tax equalization problems.

86,000 Signers

Petitions to place the issue on the ballot were circulated by 2,653 volunteers in 88 of Nebraska's 93 counties. Some 86,785 valid signatures, 29,000 more than required, were gathered.

The Farm Bureau received active support in the drive from the Nebraska Grange, the Nebraska Farmers Union, the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Assn., the Nebraska Wheat Growers Assn., and the Nebraska Stockgrowers Assn.

Nebraskans for Fair Taxation, the organization formed to support the 1965 state income tax law, also endorsed the petition effort.

School Aid Requirement, Duis Change Sought

Constitutional Amendment 14, proposed by the Legislature, would tie a program of state aid to education to a broadened state tax base and modify the Duis Amendment adopted by the electorate in 1954.

The proposed amendment provides that, when a general sales or income tax, or a combination of the two, is enacted:

—The state be permitted to levy a property tax only to raise funds to finance capital building improvements.

—At least 20% of the proceeds from the broadened tax base be allocated to the common schools.

The Duis Amendment now provides that once a sales or income tax is adopted, the state would be prohibited from levying any property tax.

3.4 Mills Now

Some 3.4 mills of the current (1966) state property tax levy of 10.67 mills is used to finance capital building improvements. Thus, if Amendment 14 were now in effect, the state would be limited to a property tax of 3.4 mills.

Proponents of the proposed amendment stress the need for property tax relief at the local level, particularly in Nebraska's school districts.

Use of broadened tax base revenue for school support would permit local school districts to reduce their property tax levies, it is argued. That reduction in property tax would come in addition to a near 70% cut in the state property levy.

Continued State Interest

Retention of a state property tax for capital construction would permit the state to balance its tax program

Amendments Seem Partly In Conflict

Two proposed amendments to the state constitution are among the three major tax proposals which dominate special issues on the November 8 general election ballot.

The constitutional amendments appear to conflict with one another, at least in part, so that both could not become fully operative even if each received a favorable vote next month.

The constitution provides that, in the event conflicting amendments are approved, the one receiving the highest number of affirmative votes would become effective "as to all conflicting provisions."

Amendment 301 would prohibit the state from levying a further and assure continued state interest in property tax assessment and equalization, opponents contend.

Opponents generally argue that the Duis Amendment should be retained in order property tax, while Amendment 14 would permit the state to levy a property tax only to raise funds to finance capital building improvements once a broadened tax base becomes effective.

However, Amendment 14 also provides that the state must allocate at least 20% of the revenue derived from a broadened tax base to local school districts.

And supporters of the state aid to education portion of the amendment have announced their intent to go to court, if necessary, to secure enactment of at least that provision should the two conflicting amendments both gain voter approval, with Amendment 301 receiving the highest number of affirmative votes.

Both constitutional amendments must receive a majority vote which equals at least 35% of the total votes cast in the election in order to be approved.

The third tax issue would not alter the state constitution. It merely seeks a vote of the people on whether they approve or reject the 1965 state income tax law.

Harrison Council Ponders Proposed Sewage System

Harrison — The Harrison City Council passed a resolution proposing construction of a sewer system to serve the entire community.

About 145 homes, all with individual septic tanks, would be served.

The council set Sept. 20 for a public hearing on the proposal. The sewer system would cost about $120,000, about one-third provided by a federal grant.

The lagoon settling system would be located northwest of Harrison.

East Germany's 17th Anniversary Celebration Quiet

Berlin — East Germany, largely unrecognized throughout the non-communist world, marked its 17th anniversary with music, parades and wreath-laying ceremonies.

The East German news agency, ADN, said a performance of a Russian army orchestra and a mailman's footrace were included in the celebrations. In East Berlin, Prime Minister Willi Stoph and leading Communist Party members placed wreaths at the monument to socialism.

The low-key observance was in sharp contrast to the official celebration staged last Aug. 13 on the fifth anniversary of the Communist built wall dividing the city.

Foot Makes the Difference For Top Ten

By Associated Press
The foot, sometimes forgotten in these days when footballs fly through the air with the greatest of ease on the arms of aerial-minded quarterbacks, played a prominent role in the college gridiron sport Saturday.

While top ranked Michigan State was rolling along with a 20-7 victory over Michigan's Wolverines, UCLA, No. 2 in The Associated Press poll, needed a 17-yard field goal in the last seven seconds by Kurt Zimmerman to get past the surprising Rice Owls 27-24.

Georgia Tech, No. 9, and Tennessee, No. 8, staged a battle of toes with the Engineers coming out ahead

2-1 in field goals and 6-3 in the score. Tech's Bunky Henry booted the ball 22 and 41 yards in the second period while Gary Wright kicked one of 27 for the Volunteers in the second quarter.

The margin of No. 6 ranked Southern California's 17-14 victory over Washington in a night game also was a field goal. It was a 30-yarder by Pat Cushman in the third period, but the Trojans needed a five-yard touchdown pass from substitute quarterback Toby Page to Ron Drake to wrap up the victory.

The importance of the foot also extended to unforked teams. For example, there was Illinois' 10-9 surprising triumph over Ohio State at Champaign. The Buckeyes Gary Cairns booted three from distances of 22, 28 and 55 yards, the latter for a modern Big Ten record. But they were not enough to offset a 29-yarder and an extra point after a touchdown by the Illinois' Jim Stoltz.

Oklahoma's resurgent Sooners, an easy mark for Texas in recent years, used four field goals by Mike Vachon to upset the Longhorns 18-9.

But it took New Hampshire to use the foot in the last second for victory. The time keeper was ready to fire the final gun when Kurt Vollherst split the crossbars from 27 yards out for a 10-7 New Hampshire triumph.

Arkansas, ranked fifth, was the only member of the Top Ten to lose face except Tennessee. The Razorbacks lost to Baylor 7-0, after winning 24 straight regular season games, on Terry Southall's 21-yard fourth quarter scoring pass to Bobby Green.

While Michigan State was clearing a major hurdle in quest of its second straight Big Ten title and UCLA was edging past Rice, third ranked Notre Dame again cut loose with its devastating sophomore aerial team of Terry Hanratty and Jim Seymour and blanked Army 35-0 for the Irish' third straight victory.

Hanratty completed 11 of 20 passes, eight to Seymour, for 195 yards, and all the scoring before the two teen-agers sat out the last half. The defeat dropped Army from the unbeaten ranks.

Alabama, defending national champions, ran over Clemson 26-0 with southpaw quarterback Ken Stabler engineering three long scoring drives. The victory left the Crimson Tide with a 3-0 record.

Nebraska, No. 7, had no trouble with Wisconsin of the Big Ten, scoring in every period for a 31-3 conquest.

Steve Spurrier tossed three touchdown passes in leading 10th-ranked Florida to a 22-19 decision over Florida State.

Other scores included: EAST—Harvard 34, Columbia 7; Holy Cross 14, Colgate 14; Cornell 45, Penn 38; Dartmouth 31, Princeton 13; Penn State 30, Boston College 21; Pittsburgh 17, West Virginia 14; Syracuse 28, Navy 14; Yale 24, Brown 0.

Dodgers Filled With Dejection

Baltimore (AP)—The picture of dejection, Don Drysdale sat on the little stool by his dressing room in Memorial Stadium Sunday.

His head was down: It was many long moments before he cared to speak, and then it was almost a whisper.

One mighty blow, the home run by Frank Robinson in the fourth inning, had spelled disaster and the clinching 1-0 World Series win for the Baltimore Orioles.

"I got the ball up, maybe a little too high. It was a fast ball," said Big D, adding the familiar, "It was just one of those things."

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey made the grounds of the morbid quiet Dodger dressing room.

He made a point of shaking Drysdale's hand.

"I saw you a year ago," said the vice president, "and you were great."

Neither Humphrey nor Drysdale made mention that what the vee saw at Minnesota was Drysdale losing in the first game to the Twins.

A friend suggested maybe the vice president was a flax, but Don smiled and insisted, "Oh, no, I don't think so."

Manager Walter Alston managed to smile through it all. Someone asked how he really felt.

"You fellows," he kidded the writers, "Don't want to know about hits and plays, you just want to psyche me."

"Well, if you want to know the truth, I'd feel a lot better of we'd have won, but I'm not going to jump off a bridge."

Was there any particular turning point in the game? "I thought Willie Davis' catch might turn it around—but it didn't."

Alston referred to Davis' spectacular leaping catch at the 410-foot mark of Boog Powell's smash in the same fourth inning that robbed Powell of a home run.

Willie Davis was asked if maybe the catch in a manner redeemed himself for the two fly balls he dropped at Los Angeles last Thursday.

Willie, munching on a hamburger, also was unhappy as anyone else in the place, replied in one word.

"Naw."

—OLD MAN PROVES HIMSELF— 'Bad Guy' Robinson Now Feels Satisfied

Baltimore (AP)—Frank Robinson wouldn't say he was a superhero, but as the hero of Baltimore's World Series triumph stood jammed in his cubicle in the dressing room he acknowledged that he had accomplished his two aims—wiping out the old man and bad guy raps.

"I've been playing this season since Dec. 9," said Robinson, who learned on that day he had been traded to the Orioles by the Cincinnati Reds. "I wanted to have a good year—it was the first thought in my mind at that time."

"I wanted to have a good year especially to show the people in the front office there that I wasn't washed up, and I wanted to show them by having a good year."

"And I wanted to show the people, the officials, the City of Baltimore they were getting a guy who still could play baseball."

Robinson accomplished that during the regular season by becoming the first player in a decade to win the batting triple crown.

And he emphasized his claims in the World Series, hitting a homer in the first game, then putting his stamp on the finale Sunday when he provided the only run of the game as Baltimore completed a four-game sweep of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

As everyone pressed forward to listen to him in the Orioles dressing room, he broke away to accept congratulations from Vice-President Humphrey and Dodger Manager Walt Alston.

Then he turned back and went on, pointing to the fact that he felt he had proved his point.

"It's not just what I did, but winning," Robinson said calmly and quietly. "I would have felt good without winning but not as good. Winning makes it better."

"Now it's all gone. Next year I don't have to show Mr. DeWitt (the Cincinnati owner). I don't have to show him what I can do again. As far as that's concerned it's gone."

Also gone, he feels strongly, is the bad guy rap he's been carrying around since 1960 when he had a run-in with third baseman Eddie Mathews of the old Milwaukee Braves.

"Over there in the National League they said I had to be mad to play good baseball," Robinson explained. "It really began when I had that run-in with Mathews in 1960."

And, after saying he preferred not to repeat it, he continued:

"I hit a ball on the fists and it rolled to the bullpen. When I hit second, the ball was still kicking around so I started for third. Mathews took the throw in the baseline, and I slid."

"I guess he figured I slid unnecessarily hard. I said I can't wait for him to tag me. And then we tangled."

Both fired fists, and Robinson leaves no doubt he knows who the loser was in the exchange.

"It was the only fight I ever had," he said. "I lost. My left eye was almost completely closed. That was enough for me."

But he played the second game, hit a two-run homer, collected a second hit, made an outstanding catch and the Reds won 4-0. And the he-plays-well-when-mad label was pinned on him.

There were, however, no incidents this year and Robinson even survived the extra pressure he felt was on him, particularly in the series.

"There's more on me than on the little fellows," he explained. "I'm written up in the paper, everybody says you gotta stop him, and the opposition figures if they stop the big guy they stop the whole team."

"The little guy just walks up and smashes the ball."

PACKERS STOPPED— Cards, Dallas Still Unbeaten In NFL

By Associated Press
The Dallas Cowboys and St. Louis Cardinals remained unbeaten—Dallas with no trouble and St. Louis with a great deal—and the Green Bay Packers got upset Sunday in National Football League action.

The Packers fell into a first place tie in the Western Conference with Los Angeles, each with a 4-1 record, when the previously winless San Francisco 49ers edged them 21-20.

Dallas got five touchdown passes from Don Meredith, three of them to Bob Hayes and trounced Philadelphia 56-7, running its record to 4-0.

The Cardinals remained one-half game ahead of Dallas in the East, with a 5-0 mark, by beating the hapless New York Giants 22-19 on Charley Johnson's fourth down, 30-yard TD pass to Billy Gambrell in the waning minutes of the game.

In other NFL Sunday games, the Chicago Bears beat Baltimore 27-17, Los Angeles edged Detroit 14-7 and Washington downed Atlanta 33-20. Cleveland beat Pittsburgh 41-10 Saturday night.

Oakland defeated Miami 20-10 in the only Sunday game in the American League, Buffalo upset Boston 20-10, New York nipped San Diego 17-16 and Kansas City walloped Denver 37-10 Saturday night.

Omaha Knights Defeated, 3-2

St. Paul, Minn. (AP)—Oklahoma City defeated Omaha, 3-2, in a hockey exhibition game Sunday night.

Oklahoma City, play-off champion last year, scored twice in the first period on goals by Brian Bradley and John Arbour. Ron Buchanan got the winning goal in the final period.

Larry McKey scored in the second and third periods for Omaha.

Four Services Given Fixed Quota Of Low Test Scorers

Washington (AP) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has assigned the military services fixed quotas of men they must enlist from among the lowest mental category acceptable for duty by law.

McNamara, it was learned, issued a memorandum effective Oct. 1 setting the Navy and Air Force shares at 15% of the numbers of men each signs up during a three-month period. The Marine quota was put at 18%, the Army's 25%.

The move is related to the defense chief's program of bringing into the armed forces up to 100,000 men a year who would otherwise be rejected for service because of mental or physical deficiencies.

Easing Tests

A step in that direction was a recent easing of mental test standards which men must meet in order to be drafted.

Since the Army currently is the only service using the draft, something had to be done to prevent it from getting a disproportionate share of rejects and carrying perhaps too heavy a remedial training burden.

So McNamara established the quotas — the first since the late 1950s, "to assure an equitable distribution" of less intelligent types.

These men, classed in a marginal group referred to as Mental Category Four, have posted scores of 10 to 30 on the Armed Forces Qualification Test. Men who score below 10 — Category Five — are legally exempt from duty.

Traditionally, the Navy and Air Force wind up with the pick of the nation's young men, particularly when draft calls run high — as they have — and many individuals enlist in them to avoid ground combat in the Army.

Category Four Dip

But the Navy and Air Force, as well as the Marines, have dipped into Category Four to some extent in recent years when necessary to meet recruiting goals.

McNamara's quota setup is not unprecedented. In Korea, when Selective Service had to scrape the bottom of the manpower pool, the services were told that 27% of the men they recruited had to come from the Category Four. Again, this was to avoid a situation where the Army was loaded up with the lesser educated men — or, as the Pentagon describes them, men whose test scores "indicate insufficient aptitude to assimilate the caliber of training required."

Based on enlistment quotas for this quarter—October, November and December — the Air Force will enlist about 4,500 from category four; the Navy 3,200 and the Marines 2,250. The Army's 25% quota is meaningless, a spokesman said, since the Army will take whatever numbers are provided by the draft.

Under the latest downward revision in draft standards an individual must score at least 10 on the Armed Forces qualification Test, plus score 90 on two of seven aptitude tests he receives. A score of 10 means he rates in the upper 90% of the population.

Technical Test Out

Previously an individual scoring as low as 10 had to make high grades in three aptitude areas, including a general technical test, to be drafted. The general technical requirement has been dropped.

McNamara told the services if they were unable to meet their quotas of Category Four individuals, any deficit during a calendar quarter would be filled by draftees.

A spokesman said the same catch-up provision was in effect during the Korean War but never had to be used because each service met its quota.

Both the Army and Marines have, for some time, had special companies to provide any additional training required for slow-progressing trainees.

The Navy also has established a remedial training program.

The Air Force has no classes especially designed for slow learners, a Pentagon spokesman said, and does not foresee the need for any.

The Air Force said that, even with a fixed quota of individuals who score low on the intelligence tests, it expects over 90% of its new men will be high school graduates.

Although draft standards have recently been eased, enlistment standards for volunteers remain the same, for the present, the Pentagon said. These standards vary somewhat among the four services, and are based on whether a man is a high school graduate, and how he scores on AFQT and aptitude tests.

Bunche's Daughter Dies In Plunge From Building

New York (AP) — Mrs. Burton (Jane) Pierce, daughter of Ralph J. Bunche, Nobel Peace Prize winner and U.S. undersecretary of the United Nations, died early Sunday when she fell or jumped from her Bronx apartment residence, police reported. She was 33.

Bunche said he and his wife were notified of their daughter's death by police at 2:10 a.m.

"It came as a great shock," he said. "I know my daughter was not ill or anything like that. We just don't know what happened. All I know is she is gone."

Mrs. Pierce's death was discovered when her husband, Burton, returned home from a night football game and found his wife missing. He awakened their older daughter, Karen, 9, who told him she thought her mother was visiting friends.

It was then that the superintendent of the building in which the family lives reported that he had found the woman's body, fully clothed, in a courtyard.

It was not known from what height she fell. The Pierce apartment is on the first floor of the nine-story building.

No notes were found, police said.

The Pierces were married in September, 1956, and have three children, Nina, 4, John, 7, and Karen.

Bunche said police told him his daughter's fall was "probably from the roof."

An autopsy revealed the cause of death as multiple fractures and hemorrhage apparently resulting from "a fall from a good height."

A chemical analysis of the vital organs was to be conducted, but that would take at least several weeks.

Security Council Moves To Keep U Thant For Full Five-Year Term

United Nations, (AP) — A move was afoot Sunday for action in the U.N. Security Council Oct. 27 to keep U Thant on as secretary-general for another five-year term.

Council members were hopeful he would take a full new term.

Diplomatic sources said Lord C. Radcliffe of Britain, president of the council this month, had suggested to the other 14 members that it meet Oct. 27 to discuss the secretary-generalship and they probably will agree in consultations now going on.

The secretary-general is chosen by the 119-nation General Assembly on recommendations of the Security Council. Both must act by Nov. 3 because Thant's present five-year term runs out that day.

Thant, a Burmese, announced on Sept. 1 that, for personal, official and political reasons, he had decided not to offer himself for a second term.

Consider Staying

He said on Sept. 19 that if the council and the U.N. membership had not found a successor in the next few weeks, he would consider staying on to the end of the assembly session, Dec. 20, or the end of the year.

Thant's term is certain to be extended to one of those two dates unless he agrees to take a new term. In that case he can probably get any length he wants—from one or two years up to the customary five.

After a private meeting Sept. 29, the council announced it had reached a consensus "that if U Thant should express willingness to serve another term as the secretary-general, it would fully meet the desires of the members of this council." A spokesman then said Thant would "give the matter careful consideration."

But Thant has not yet given the council a definite reply. In view of that, no one is yet being considered seriously to succeed him. Council members generally feel that in the end he will take a new five-year term.

'Feeling In Bones'

"I think they almost all feel that way," said a member of one council delegation.

"Everybody has a sort of feeling in his bones that he will stay," declared another.

One acknowledged that there are not many facts to base the supposition on. That is one reason why many State Department officials, as distinct from U.S. delegation people, think Thant will leave.

He has been under growing pressure to stay ever since last spring. The climax came Friday when President Johnson called on Thant in his office and, as the President announced later, told him Americans felt "that in this hour of great trial we needed him all the more."

The pressure has been building as speaker after speaker in the assembly's general debate appealed to Thant to agree to a new term. He already had endorsements from President Charles de Gaulle of France, Prime Ministers Harold Wilson of Britain and Alexei N. Kosygin of the Soviet Union and nearly all U.N. regional groups.

Ghana Initiates Proceedings Against Exiled Ex-President

Accra, Ghana (AP) The government announced Sunday it will start criminal proceedings against former president Kwame Nkrumah on the recommendation of an inquiry which alleged that Nkrumah used a government company as a clearing house for bribes.

Nkrumah, 57, is in exile in Guinea. He was overthrown by an army coup last February.

The three-man board of inquiry, headed by Supreme Court Judge Samuel Azu Crabbe, recommended that Nkrumah's confidante, Emmanuel Ayei-Kumi and 11 other persons also be tried.

One of those named was William Halm, former governor of Ghana's central bank and a former ambassador to Washington.

The inquiry said that Nkrumah was "the only apparent owner" of the National Development Company (NADECO) and that its accounts were manipulated to defraud its revenue and "to conceal the corrupt dealings" of Nkrumah. It did little genuine business, the report said.

The inquiry also recommended that the company be dissolved and its assets invested for the benefit of the state. NADECO's assets are estimated at more than $2.8 million dollars.

RFK Reiterates Stand On Candidacy

Washington (AP) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., said Sunday he will run for re-election in 1970.

He again said he will not be a candidate for president or vice-president in 1968. In addition to speculation about his 1968 plans, there has been some conjecture Kennedy might run for governor of New York in 1970 rather than for a second Senate term.

Kennedy, on the Mutual Radio program "Reporters Roundup," added, "I am interested in foreign affairs and I intend to remain in the United States Senate as long as the people of New York will return me to office."

The senator put himself on the same side with 1964 Republican presidential candidate Barry Goldwater on one issue — atomic weapons in North Viet Nam.

Kennedy quoted Goldwater as saying atomic weapons would not be helpful in North Viet Nam because there were not suitable targets, then said:

"I don't want to side with Sen. Goldwater against (former) President (Dwight D.) Eisenhower — but I think that in my judgment it is a wiser position than the one that was suggested by President Eisenhower."

Iowans Swarm Bobby On Barnstorming Tour

Des Moines (UPI) — The magic Kennedy charm was on display in Iowa Sunday.

Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-New York, was greeted by thousands of persons—including girls chanting "We want Bobby" — as he barnstormed Iowa in for Democratic candidacies.

A stiff north wind blowing his shock of wavy hair, Kennedy scribbled hundreds of autographs on scraps of paper and campaign posters, shook countless hands and was mobbed by the crowds.

Greeted At Theater

Kennedy spent Saturday night at Sioux City, and started a four-city Iowa tour there Sunday morning. He received an enthusiastic welcome at a packed Sioux City theater as he criticized Republicans and lauded Democratic candidates.

Kennedy attended 8:30 a.m. mass at St. Jean the Baptist Catholic Church in Sioux City, then began his tour with a reception and a Democratic rally.

Large crowds greeted Kennedy everywhere he went in Sioux City.

20-Minute Reception

A crowd of about 2,500 gave Kennedy a wild 20-minute reception at the Des Moines airport. He was jostled about as he milled through the crowd. About half of the airport crowd was girls and they surged about Kennedy.

At a speech at a downtown hotel (the Fort Des Moines), Kennedy criticized Republicans in Congress for opposing medicare, federal aid to education and the feed grains program.

"The Republicans now praise these programs," he said. "Where were they when the education bill was before Congress? They voted almost 3-1 against it."

Kennedy said Democrats "did something. We may not always have been right—but we did something."

Rep. Powell Urges Responsible 'Black Power'

New York (AP) — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Sunday labeled all the civil rights demonstrations during the last five years as a "magnificent exercise of near-futility" and called upon Negroes to assume control of their destiny.

The Harlem Democrat, preaching at the Abyssinian Baptist Church where he is pastor, urged Negroes to utilize responsible "black power," but sharply criticized those who use it for "misguided and selfish ends."

"Black power," he said, "is a constructive approach to the new life of freedom for black people in the great society. Violence must play no part in its fulfillment."

He said there were those who would run through the streets "shouting black power in a purposeless scorched-earth policy."

"There are those who

scream 'burn, baby, burn' when they should be shouting 'learn, baby, learn,'" he said.

"We have indulged ourselves in the past five years in a magnificent exercise of near-futility with our marches, our sit-ins, our demonstrations, our picketing and now our rebellions — and we are still where we were," Powell declared.

"We have called the white man's attention to our sorry condition. But we have made no conversions. We have transformed few minds. And we have made no significant changes in the economic conditions of the black masses," he said.

The Negroes, he told the congregation, must exercise "a massive responsibility for their fate. Black people themselves must assume a loving control and direction of their destiny."

He asserted there was "no violence, nor anti-white feelings in the 'black power' I seek for black people."

Negroes must take pride in their culture and origin; they must exhibit initiative; they must have jobs and assume more responsibility in running communities, cities and states, he said.

Lady Cat-Killer's Visit Ratty Venice Dreading

Venice, Italy (AP)—Struggling with an invasion of rats so fierce they frighten cats, Venice learned Sunday that a gentle English lady will soon arrive—on a cat-killing mission.

No one asked her to come. In fact, when she visited Venice last January she stirred such a storm of criticism and warnings that the local Society for the Protection of Animals ordered all its 20 agents on emergency duty to see she kept her hands off the city's felines. A policeman trailed her all during her stay.

But for Miss Mable Raymond-Hawkins, who operates a sanctuary for stray animals in England, reducing the canal city's cat population is an act of love.

"Of course I hate being involved with destroying animals," she said Sunday in London as she announced plans to leave for Venice Monday. "But there are hundreds of cats living by the canal banks in Venice that are past saving."

Stop Suffering
"At my sanctuary I spend all my time saving animals, but I can see the only way to stop the cats suffering in Venice is to destroy them."

To many Venetians this was exasperating news. Later this month the city plans to launch a year-long campaign to fight a growing plague of robust rats moving into Venice from a nearby garbage dump island.

If any complaints are heard about the city's cats these days it is that there are not enough tough ones around to take care of the rats.

Venice has an estimated 28,000 cats in residence these days. The city has always regarded cats as a normal and useful part of the local scene, as natural to Venice as the rickety buildings, the stench that rises from the canals in summer and the graceful gondolas.

When Miss Raymond-Hawkins and a friend were here in January to suggest ways of containing the cat population, they got a brusque brush-off from city officials.

"There is no problem with cats here," snapped Mayor Giovanni Favaretto Fiesca.

EVERYBODY'S MONEY:

Decisions Should Be Based On Review Of All Factors

By Merrylyle S. Rukeyser

A widespread human failing, which is costly, is inability to do consolidated thinking and include all the factors relevant to decision-making.

This fault can be overcome by borrowing from the discipline of double entry bookkeeping, which inserts figures on both sides of the ledger, showing for each item "where from" and "where to." False conclusions result from single entry bookkeeping.

Thus, a wise and knowledgeable colleague of mine was incomplete in answering a query from a reader.

The question read: "We plan to buy a new $20,000 home, and we're wondering how much we could save in interest by getting a 10- or 20-year mortgage instead of a 30-year loan."

The answer read: "If you can handle a monthly payment of $222.05 . . . you'd be able to save a total of $16,525.20 on a 10-year vs. a 30-year home mortgage at six per cent interest."

Overimplified
But this reply oversimplifies the complexity of ingredients in the problem. If the home owner elects to accelerate the process and to pay off the mortgage in one decade instead of three, he deprives himself of $102.13 a month, which is the excess payment on the short mortgage over the long one.

Secondly, he must allow for the earning power of $102.13 invested in a variety of channels, such as in growth stocks and tax exempt bonds.

Thirdly, in the short mortgage, a larger portion of the monthly payment is non-deductible for income tax purposes. This results from the fact that in the 10-year mortgage the principal is repaid faster and each monthly payment has a larger content for application to reduction of the principal, a non-deductible factor, and a smaller ratio of the payment applicable to interest, which is deductible.

Fourthly, the rigid provisions of a short mortgage impose a heavy and inflexible burden on the family income provider. This presupposes an unbroken era of family affluence, with no leeway to untoward economic and health vicissitudes. It would give the homeowner more discretionary control over his affairs if he took the long mortgage, with an option to anticipate or prepay all or part of the principal without penalty. Thus, if the homeowner is blessed with good fortune, he can set his own pace in getting out of debt as rapidly as he wishes.

MERRYLYLE RUKEYSER

Of course, in normal mortgage markets, the man with a short term mortgage loan could refinance it and extend the time of payments, if necessary or desirable. However, this puts decision-making in the hands of the lender, and in abnormal periods, like the current tight money squeeze, there is reluctance on the part of lenders to extend mortgage arrangements.

Tax Liability
Fifthly, since we now live in a tax civilization, transactions must be viewed in light of their impact on the tax liability of a person. Obviously, the actual net saving on various lengths of mortgage loans varies with the tax status of the individual. The subsidy to the home owner in ability to deduct from net tax liability the amount of interest paid is obviously worth vastly more to the rich taxpayer in the 70% bracket than to the person in the 20% bracket.

Similarly, the advantage of retaining funds for investment as an alternative to rapid amortization of a mortgage varies with the tax bracket of the individual.

A prudent approach is to retain as many options as possible, such as the privilege to take the longer period to repay on the one hand, or to exercise a privilege to prepay, on the other. Among the imponderables is the trend of future interest rates. Within 30 years a six per cent rate may indeed seem to be unduly harsh, and the flexibility to refinance at the will of the borrower is desirable.

In making life financial plans, it is well to be flexible and unfrozen and to review programs periodically in light of general economic, personal and family changes.

Shipbuilding Riots Omaha Police Only One Life Down; Workers' Answer Still Has Eight To Go

Trieste, Italy (AP) — A brooding calm settled over this port city Sunday as authorities reported 80 persons injured and nearly 500 arrested in the worst rioting to hit Trieste in years.

Police were braced for any resumption of workers' demonstrations that broke into wild rioting Saturday morning and continued with sporadic outbreaks until after midnight.

Workers were called out by a communist-led union to protest a government plan to reorganize shipbuilding in the Trieste and Genoa port areas. They fought police in pitched battles that paralyzed downtown Trieste.

Police in jeeps, firing tear gas grenades, clashed with rioters who fought with iron bars, bricks and stones. Rioters overturned cars and buses to make barricades, poured oil on streets, smashed street lamps and tried to attack the offices of a local newspaper.

Police reinforcements from three nearby cities sped here to bolster anti-riot squads.

In the early hours past midnight police were still firing tear gas to rioters lodged behind barricades. They shot flames into the sky where street lamps had been smashed.

Arrest Attempt Foiled By Crowd In Los Angeles

Los Angeles (AP) — A crowd of Negroes grabbed a man being arrested on an intoxication charge out of the hands of two police officers early Sunday and attacked the officers, police said.

One officer was hit by a bottle thrown from an apartment balcony and the other was clubbed by his own baton while being choked, police added. Neither was seriously hurt.

A bystander, a Negro woman, was hit in the eye by another bottle. She required minor treatment.

One officer broke free and ran for reinforcements, who broke up the crowd of an estimated 25 Negroes in a Negro section of suburban Venice that has been marked by such incidents.

Police said the man they were attempting to arrest got away.

Omaha Police Only One Life Down; Workers' Answer Still Has Eight To Go

Bournemouth, England (AP) — A cat was revived Sunday by a man's "kiss of life"—mouth resuscitation—after the orange-eyed feline nearly strangled during a tree rescue.

The cat named Muschen got stuck high in a 65-foot rotting pine tree. A fire brigade tried for an hour to rescue him but had to give up because their ladders were too short and dead wood was falling from the tree.

Then a former circus trapeze artist, Duncan Seymour, 35, climbed the tree and lassoed the cat in a third attempt. But the noose slipped around Muschen's neck, choking him. Seymour dropped the cat 30 feet to the ground.

Then inspector Bill Hilton of the Royal Society of Prevention of Cruelty to Animals took over. When heart massage failed, Hilton gave Muschen the kiss of life and it worked.

Sunday night Muschen was enjoying the rest of his fabled eight lives—sipping milk laced with glucose.

RESULT OF PETITION DRIVE . . .

State Income Tax Law Faces Ballot Box Test

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Nebraska voters will decide next month whether to sustain or reject the state income tax law adopted by the 1965 Legislature.

The issue will appear on the ballot as the result of a successful referendum petition drive which secured 82,132 valid signatures in 84 of Nebraska's 93 counties.

The drive, directed by Marvin Werve and Richard Herman, both of Omaha, produced 53,000 more signatures than required to force a vote on the historic tax law.

The question will be so worded on the ballot that a yes vote will sustain the act and a no vote will reject it. The issue will be numbered 300.

OK'd Or Nullified

If approved, the income tax would become effective January 1 and replace the state property tax. If rejected, the law would simply be nullified.

The flat rate proposed in the act would be applied against the net income of corporations and the net taxable income of individuals as provided in the federal income tax law.

In the case of individuals, the rate applies against income minus deductions and exemptions as reflected on Line 11d of the Internal Revenue Service Form 1040.

Exemptions include $600 for an individual or $1,200 for a couple, an additional $600 for

ELECTIONS—1966

Starting with the accompanying article on the income tax, and three other tax stories on Page 8, is The Star's biennial series of stories designed to help the readers know the candidates and understand the issues on which he will vote in November.

The statewide series, by veteran political writer Don Walton, will run daily for three weeks.

1. This week will be given over to articles about constitutional amendments and referendum proposals.

2. The second week will begin discussion of the candidates.

3. The third week will deal with the candidates in the big three races—for U.S. Senate, Congress in the First District, and Governor.

Following that will be articles on county candidates and the city liquor-by-the-drink issue, prepared by our county and city hall reporters.

persons over 65 or blind, and an additional $600 for each dependent as defined in the federal code.

Deductions Allowed

Base deductions are permitted for charitable contributions, medical expenses, interest payments, taxes and other miscellaneous items and adjustments.

Actual rate of the tax would be determined by the size of legislative appropriations. The rate required to finance current annual appropriations has been estimated between two and three-fourths per cent and 3 1/2.

The tax law, chiefly sponsored by Sen. Hal Bauer of Lincoln, received 26-23 legislative approval and became law without the signature of the governor. Its enactment cracked 99 years of state government dependence on the property tax.

The act immediately ran into the referendum petition challenge which, in turn, was subjected to a court test by proponents of the law who organized as Nebraskans for Fair Taxation.

The State Supreme Court ultimately upheld the validity

Claim Method Fair

Proponents of the income tax law contend that it is a fair means of broadening the tax base, providing tax relief for property and distributing the tax load in a more equitable manner. Income, they argue, is the fairest basis for determining taxes—and the 1965 act is a fair income tax.

Supporters of the law include major farm and education organizations and the State AFL-CIO.

Gov. Philip Sorenson, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, supports the act; his opponent, Republican nominee Norbert Tiemann, opposes it.

Opponents argue that the 1965 law is neither fair nor equitable. Some would prefer a progressive rate structure; some believe the federal government has pre-empted the field with its income tax; others believe a general sales tax would be a preferable replacement for the state property tax; others prefer to continue to rely on property as the state tax base.

U.S. Hopes To Gain Indirect Touch With War Prisoners

Washington (AP)—The government hopes it can gain indirect contact with U.S. war prisoners by letting an American religious group help send medical supplies to the North Vietnamese.

The strategy unfolded over the weekend as the Treasury Department confirmed it has given a Yale University group permission to send $300 worth of medical goods to North Viet Nam and Viet Cong-held areas of South Viet Nam via a Canadian Quaker organization.

A Treasury official said in an interview that the Canadian Friends Service Committee has told the U.S. government it is negotiating with Hanoi and the Viet Cong for permission to dispatch observers to North Viet Nam.

The observers want to check distribution of the supplies and make contact with U.S. prisoners of war.

North Viet Nam so far has refused to discuss an exchange of war prisoners and has not let International Red Cross representatives talk with the prisoners.

There are believed to be more than 100 captured Americans in North Vietnamese hands.

The official said the State Department and Commerce Department were consulted "at adequately high levels" before the Treasury issued its license to the group of Yale religious leaders.

The Yale group plans to send money to the Canadian Friends group, which will purchase the supplies and put them aboard the Russian freighter Alexander Pushkin, which sails from Toronto Wednesday.

The official said the limited license would remain under constant review, and that no decision had been made about issuing further licenses.

He acknowledged that the license is being granted partly as an experiment to see if it might help the Canadian group win permission to contact the prisoners.

Illegitimacy Rate Serious Problem In New Zealand

Auckland, New Zealand (AP)—Illegitimacy is becoming a serious problem in New Zealand, Gov. Gen. Sir Bernard Fergusson told a Marriage Guidance Council conference in Wellington Saturday.

"Last year almost one in every nine confinements produced an illegitimate child," he said. "This is twice the present figure for Australia and the United States and 50% more than the figure in Britain."

Slow Skyraider Cannons MIG21

... U.S. LEADS DOGFIGHTS, 23-5

Saigon (AP)—U.S. Navy planes shot down two communist MIG21 jets 35 miles south of Hanoi Sunday and boosted to 23-5 the American edge in dogfighting over North Viet Nam. A third enemy fighter was reported winged.

The U.S. command announced the aerial victory was scored by two relatively slow, propeller-driven A1E Skyraiders and a jet F8 Crusader.

Air action dominated developments as ground fighting in South Viet Nam, marked by heavy encounters in the central and northern sectors last week, dwindled to small, scattered skirmishes.

The two MIG21s, delta-winged jets of Russian design rated at twice the speed of sound, flew to their destruction in challenging fighter-bombers attacking a bridge at Phay Ly.

All three Red pilots may have been encouraged by the fact nobody on either side was hit in a flurry with U.S. Air Force F105 Thunderchiefs hammered Saturday. But this time it was different.

Cannon, Sidelwinder A Skyraider launched from the carrier Intrepid lined up its sights and downed one of the enemy fighters with rockets and 20mm cannon shells. The Crusader, from the carrier Oriskany, got the other with a heat-seeking Sidelwinder.

A third MIG, believed to be a 21, ventured too close to another of the slow but dependable Skyraiders. A spokesman said the Skyraider pilot cut loose with cannon fire that chopped into the MIG's wing and started smoke to pouring from it. The MIG pilot hit his throttle hard and fled.

The two kills increased to 23 the number of enemy jets downed in air action over the north since the first such clash April 4, 1965.

But American losses, in all, over the north mounted to 396 planes. Spokesmen announced North Vietnamese ground fire downed a Navy Skyraider Saturday. The pilot is listed as missing.

U.S. Marines campaigning just south of the border demilitarized zone passed a milestone of sorts in their two-month old Operation

Prairie against North Vietnamese army regulars.

Find Graves

The Marines found fresh graves containing 50 enemy bodies two miles south of the zone which raised the enemy death toll above 1,000. The leathernecks now claim 1,045 North Vietnamese killed since they launched the operation Aug. 3.

McNamara In Viet Nam For Check

Saigon (AP)—U.S. Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara arrived in Saigon Monday on a four-day visit and promptly began a survey of American needs in men, money and material for the war in Viet Nam.

In a brief airport statement, McNamara said he thought the visit was appropriate because nearly 12 months had passed since his last visit and U.S. strength here had more than doubled in the interval.

Asked if the United States would ever occupy the demilitarized zone with ground forces, McNamara said, "No, our objectives remain as they always have been." These, he said, are to enable the South Vietnamese government to act without fear of pressure from the North.

"We do not intend to destroy the communist regime in North Viet Nam," McNamara said.

Asked about reports that there were shortages of helicopter pilots, McNamara said "this is not the case. We have 1,800 helicopters in Viet Nam and this total exceeds all the helicopters in the Sino-Soviet bloc. We will increase them and expand the training of our pilots."

Reds Put Missiles In Populated Spots

Saigon (AP)—Reconnaissance photographs show the North Vietnamese have established sites for some of their surface-to-air missiles (SAMs) within populated places. U.S. intelligence officer said Sunday.

American policy is to avoid bombing in areas—cities or hamlets—where North Vietnamese civilians might be killed or wounded in any numbers.

The Hanoi high command apparently is trying to use this policy to advantage in protecting its Soviet-built missiles.

The same thing happened after the United States began a large scale campaign in June to knock out North Viet Nam's oil storage depots. The North Vietnamese placed much of their oil in drums and dispersed many of these drums in villages.

According to the latest count, there are about 130 SAM sites. Only about 20% are reported occupied at any one time.

The North Vietnamese move their mobile launchers and radar vans about to shift defenses where necessary and to make it more difficult for U.S. planes to knock them out.

Officers say the SAMs' shooting score remains poor. Only about 20 American planes have been downed in more than 500 firings of such missiles.

Tireless Inez Texas Bound

Brownsville, Tex. (AP)—Residents of the Gulf coast of far south Texas were braced Sunday night for what the weather bureau said would be the expected arrival early Monday of the erratic and tireless Hurricane Inez.

The vicious storm, taking at least 150 lives, has plodded more than 2,000 miles across the Caribbean Sea and deep into the Gulf of Mexico in the past 16 days.

The offshore Padre Island was virtually evacuated and hundreds of Brownsville residents moved inland while others along the coast jammed stores and service stations for necessary supplies to weather the storm.

Inez, who sideswiped southern Florida before changing her mind and swung westward into the Gulf, was about 200 miles southeast of Brownsville at 8 p.m. (CST) and moving toward the northwest at five miles an hour. She has winds of 135 miles an hour.

The weather bureau issued warnings from Tampico, Mexico, where an army official reported tides running as high as nine feet above normal Sunday night, to the Brownsville-Port Isabel area and gale warnings northward about 150 miles to Corpus Christi, Tex.

Five State Nominees Answer Questions

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Five of the six nominees for the U.S. Senate, governor and the First District seat in the House answered questions Sunday night submitted by an audience of 300 at Westminster Presbyterian Church.

Republican Sen. Carl Curtis was represented by E. J. Faulkner of Lincoln.

Curtis, Faulkner said, had an earlier commitment to address the Sons of Italy in Omaha.

Appearing on the same platform were Gov. Frank Morrison, Democratic senatorial nominee; Lt. Gov. Philip Sorenson, Democratic gubernatorial nominee; Norbert Tiemann, Republican gubernatorial nominee; Democratic Rep. Clair Callan and his opponent, Republican nominee Robert Denney.

In reply to questions: 71% On Key Issues —Callan said that while he may have supported President Johnson's position on 92.6% of all issues voted upon in the House, he supported the President 71% on "key issues," and that is only 10% or 20% more than the average Republican congressman.

Faulkner said Curtis is not neglecting his Senate duties by campaigning in Nebraska full-time, because he is "in constant touch" with Washington and can return immediately to vote on crucial issues.

Sorenson said the difference in tax position between Tiemann and him is that he (Sorenson) proposes a combination sales-income tax (if the 1965 state income tax law is rejected) instead of predicting its adoption, and that he took this position when he filed for governor instead of "waiting until the political winds and climate were right."

Tiemann said the University of Nebraska would not need to nearly double its budget request, in one biennium to "catch up" if leadership had been provided on the state level during the last 10 years.

Favors Winning

Denney said he does not favor expanding the war in Viet Nam, but he does favor winning it and driving the North Vietnamese Communists back over the 17th parallel.

Morrison said he would retain his independence as a

U.S. senator, and that his candidacy was not undertaken at the request of the President.

In the sharpest exchange, Faulkner said Curtis will not debate Morrison because "he does not intend to turn out an audience for his opponent to engage in emotional tirades."

Curtis, Faulkner said, is "not a man chronically on all sides of every question."

Morrison said the only way the electorate can fairly judge both candidates is to subject them to questions at joint appearances.

All six speakers outlined views previously expressed in brief opening statements.

Color Highlights Brownville's Fall Festival

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Brownville — This Nebraska showplace had all the splash Sunday of red sumac along a golden cornfield.
From homespun parade to sprigs of bittersweet, the 10th annual fall festival was all color. Any hues which nature failed to paint on the town's famed seven hills showed up in main street displays.

At least a dozen artists tacked canvases to trees and fences — some of them next to less aesthetic campaign posters. For an estimated 5,000 visitors there were also quilt-making and fishnet-making and corn-cob jelly-selling.

Sell Anything
"Corn-cob jelly has been sort of a specialty the past three or four years," beamed Mrs. Myrtle McNabb, president of the Walnut Grove Cemetery Auxiliary. "We'll sell anything, though — anything that's donated to us."

Thus, pine cones and popcorn balls were included in their conglomeration, and three shades of tomatoes: green, red and yellow. Table-dressed in a different way were the makings for rusty winter bouquets.

Even more popular than the high-ridge nature trail and Missouri river boat rides were Nemaha County apple stands. Jugs of sweet cider, sparkling like oversized jewels, were stashed in many a station wagon.

Scenery Perfect
"Even last weekend the apples and beautiful bluffs roads brought car after car into town," reflected Mrs. Robert Sage, festival chairman. "We've had just enough frost to really color the trees for today. The scenery is perfect."

Calliope and organ music added to the setting for an outdoor variety program in verdant Boettner Park. So did the marigolds and pink petunias which seemed to border every yard.

Marvin Stephens' stage-coach was one of several vehicles showing riders the history-rich town. As usual, half a dozen homes restored to 19th century elegance were opened to sightseers.

There was, however, one bit of drab incongruity amid all the autumn gaudiness. Old-time silent movies were shown very unimaginatively — but necessarily — in outmoded black and white.

Plattsmouth Post Office Dedicated

Plattsmouth (P) — A new $120,000 post office was dedicated at Plattsmouth Sunday.

Leo Anderson, regional director of engineering and facilities for the post office, told a crew of more than 200 that new buildings are only part of a program to speed the mail at lower costs.

He said ZIP coding of letters will be one of the biggest helps, and called for residents to adopt the ZIP Code policy.

Nebraska Sugar Beet Harvest Underway

Sidney (S) — The 1966 sugar beet harvest, expected to run 18 tons per acre in the fertile North Platte Valley, was underway in Western Nebraska Sunday.

Nearly four million tons of sugar beets are expected to be delivered this fall to the 15 factories of the Great Western Sugar Co., the nation's largest beet sugar concern.

The factories are located in Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas and Nebraska.

President John Bunker of Great Western said the average yield for the five-state area is estimated above 16 tons per acre, the highest since 1963. If favorable weather continues, the sugar content of the beets is expected to be about average.

Bunker said 7,100 growers will harvest 237,500 acres of beets. The firm maintains slicing factories in Nebraska at Scottsbluff, Gering, Mitchell and Bayard.

Great western has paid growers $40,615,000 to date for their 1965 beets and will conclude payments in October. First of the multi-million dollar payments on the 1966 crop will be made Nov. 20.

Farmers To Allow All Access For Recreation

... UNDER CROPLAND ADJUSTMENT PROGRAM

By GLENN KREUSCHER
Farm Editor

There is going to be a new welcome sign out to hunters on 382 farms in Nebraska this fall.

The sign will read, "CAP Farm—public access for hunting-hiking, fishing-trapping."

It is part of the Cropland Adjustment Program, in which Nebraska farmers agree to permit public access to their farms under provisions of the new Cropland Adjustment Program (CAP), according to Hans O. Jensen, chairman of the Nebraska Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

The CAP provision offers farmers extra incentive payments for allowing the public to use designated cropland for recreational uses. Most of the payments are about $2.50 per acre.

Opens 47,000 Acres
Of 845 farms that qualified for the agreement, 382 chose to enter into the public access agreements that will open up an additional 47,000 acres of cropland to hunters this fall.

The Game Commission is cooperating in the venture. All of the cooperating CAP farms will be posted with a uniform sign. There will be one large sign located near the farm headquarters or in sight from the road. Smaller signs will outline the boundary of the area.

There can be no discrimination on who is allowed access to the land. Hunters or others using the property cannot drive on the land, but must confine their entry to hunting or hiking on foot.

ASCS spokesmen note that farmers cooperating with the plan are not liable for accidents and that destruction of property will be reported to appropriate authorities.

Mowing Asked
To make the land easier to hunt, farmer in some cases will be asked to mow several 50-foot strips on the land. Next year the planting of food

The nation's cattlemen have invited consumers to take a close look at the books of the cattle industry.

"It may be a rude shock for the consumers when they realize that retail prices now and in recent years may have been far too low to insure them a steady supply of beef in the future," said John Guthrie of Porterville, Calif., president of the American National Cattlemen's Association.

Guthrie notes a danger to future beef supplies as many farmers and ranchers are turning to more attractive uses than cattle for their land.

"Even some of the traditional livestock ranches are dispersing herds in favor of recreational or housing development," said Guthrie.

Guthrie said the willingness of the consumer to pay fair prices covering all costs from retail to range will reverse the situation and insure adequate supplies of beef to meet future needs.

Along this line, Herschel Newsom, master of the national Grange, said on a trip to Nebraska this past week that never again would the consumer see such a cheap market basket, and that possibly the rise in agricultural prices that is necessary to assure production has waited too long.

For some time I have questioned the value of telling the consumer he has had "the best bargain in the world" on food.

The farmer doesn't especially appreciate this, as it has been done mainly at his expense. When he can't afford to do it any longer, it might cause an unhappiness on the part of that consumer to start forking over a bigger share of the paycheck for groceries.

I noticed at the State Corn-planting Contest that when Vice President Hubert Humphrey told the audience that consumers can thank the American farmer for having the best bargain in the world on food and that consumers have reaped the benefit of abundant production from the farms, there was very little applause.

A magazine published in the heart of New York City called Co-op Contact published four charts in a recent edition that compared the prices farmers receive and what the retail price is on food, bread, milk and meat.

It was a means of showing the consumer that the farmer needs more income, that he is not responsible for rising prices and that the farmer has gotten very little of recent increases in prices.

White Backlash Rising Both North, South--Poll

By LOUIS HARRIS

A white backlash against the civil rights movement is rising across America in both the North and the South. It stems from the fear whites have for their personal safety as a result of the continuing riots and from the stepped-up Negro demands for integrated housing, the sorest point in race relations.

The slogan of "black power" has become an emotional trigger among whites even more than among Negroes. Eight out of 10 white people feel that black power is hurting the cause of civil rights. They look on black power as a bid for Negro supremacy, a direct incitement to violence which is rapidly undoing much civil rights progress.

Reaction to the rioting and heightened militancy by civil rights advocates is sharper and more extreme among low income whites. Only 15% of them feel sympathetic to the Negro cause.

Low income whites are traditionally Democratic Party voters. And many of them are contemplating leaving their party in this fall's off-year elections over the issue of civil rights.

Whites tend to feel the impact of the riots in a highly personal way. A cross section of white voters was asked:

"Does the fear of racial violence make you personally feel more uneasy on the streets?"

Given this underlying fear of personal safety, the repeated militant cries of black power have given many whites the feeling that the whole civil rights movement is bent on provoking violence.

The cross section of whites was asked:

"In your opinion, do you feel that the black power slogan is helping or hurting the cause of Negro civil rights?"

Why Black Power Hurts Negro Cause
Leads to violence
Makes me angry
Undoing all the good
Misrepresents Negro feeling

LOUIS HARRIS

Whites Afraid

Harris peaceful demonstrations boosts crowd element. Proves Communists behind it.

As a consequence, when whites were asked what they thought of Negro demonstrations for civil rights, the vast majority expressed an overwhelming negative reaction:

White people have never been all-out in support of civil rights demonstrations, but today white backing has hit a new low. Part of this aversion can be traced to the rioting and fears of violence whites see implicit in the black power slogan.

But part must also be attributed to the change in the objectives of peaceful Negro demonstrations. Having achieved legislation which now outlaws discrimination in jobs, education and the use of public accommodations, civil rights advocates are pressing for open housing laws which will forbid discrimination in the sale or rental of living quarters.

The white majority in America is opposed to open housing legislation, and the division by upper and lower income whites is dramatic:

It is argued, of course, that Negroes want to move into precisely those neighborhoods where low income whites now reside. Upper income white neighborhoods are relatively immune from extensive integrated housing because most Negroes cannot afford to move there.

But the coalescence of Negro demands for integration in housing, along with increased tensions over rioting and cries of black power, have brought white-Negro tensions to a higher point than at any time since the Negro revolution began. And the impact at the polls next month now seems inescapable.

Rock Stalemate Likely Between Britain, Spain

London (AP) — Britain is ready for a showdown with Spain in the dispute over Gibraltar when they resume talks about the rock Monday.

Britain has challenged the Franco regime to put the issue before the International Court in the Hague in tones bordering on an ultimatum. The veiled threat to Madrid was either accept the proposal or the talks may be broken off.

The likely outcome: Stalemate.

Britain rules Gibraltar now as a colony and the proud Spanish are demanding that sovereignty be handed over to them.

Physically at issue is very little—a barren 1,400-foot-high promontory three miles long and three-quarters of a mile wide, joined to the southwest coast of Spain by a low-lying strip of land.

Ceded In 1713

Since 1713, when Spain first ceded the rock to Britain, it has been used as a powerful fortress commanding the entrance to the Mediterranean. Its strategic importance made it of great value in World

Wars I and II, but its military role is on the wane.

Nevertheless, the British hold it a point of honor to keep sovereignty over the rock.

The 25,000 Gibraltarians are descendants of workmen brought in by the British over the last 250 years. The resident Spanish population is a mere handful. Though Spanish is the common tongue and the locals eat fiery piellas, they want no part of Spain's political system.

Spain, rankled at being the only European power with a foreign colony on its soil, has moved toward an economic blockade and psychological warfare in its campaign to regain the rock.

The British, confident they have legality on their side, put the next move up to the Franco regime in proposing that the dispute be handed by the International Court. Even if the Spanish agree to this—and they have indicated they won't—the court's ponderous procedures could delay a verdict for years.

Spain Blockades
In the meantime, the Spaniards have stepped up their economic blockade of the rock to the point where it is virtually isolated. Last week Madrid decreed that no merchandise, automobiles or tax-licenses should pass between Spain and Gibraltar. The bulk of Gibraltar's supplies hitherto passed through Spain.

The British are planning a massive operation to keep the rock fed by sea.

Britain feels it has the weight of sufficient legal documents behind it to sink any Spanish arguments at the World Court on ownership. Gibraltar was first captured by British forces in 1704 during the War of Spanish Succession. In 1713 Spain ceded it to Britain "in full and entire propriety to be held and enjoyed absolutely with all manner of rights forever."

Spain doesn't dispute this. But it argues that Britain, by giving almost complete internal self-rule to Gibraltar in 1964, relinquished sovereignty. And when that happened, the Spanish maintain, the 1713 treaty stipulated that Spain be given the first offer to run the rock. British spokesmen say the Gibraltarians are on record as wanting to stay British-oriented.

Vientiane, Laos (AP) — Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma left here for New York to attend the United Nations assembly. He will return to Vientiane around the end of October, he told newsmen.

Leaders Gambling On Election Fever

... TO SPEED ADJOURNMENT OVER JAM OF BILLS

Washington (AP) — Congressional leaders gambled Sunday that a burning fever to adjourn will help them plow through a massive jam of controversial legislation this week.

With all 435 seats in the House and 35 Senate places at stake in the November elections, pressure for winding up the current session is explosive.

Key Test

A key test comes in the Senate soon after it meets Monday on the motion of majority leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., to limit debate and vote on a last-ditch effort to provide self-rule for citizens of the District of Columbia.

A token Senate session for 21 seconds Saturday was held to permit the Monday showdown on this old controversy.

Sen. Wayne Morse D-Ore., offered the local government plan for the nation's capital as a rider to a $4.46 billion higher education federal aid bill. The voteless District of Columbia, now populated by a heavy Negro majority, is governed by a commission appointed by the President with Congress serving as a sort of a city council.

Mansfield and Morse must muster a two-thirds majority of senators present to impose the gag rule and thus thwart the usual filibuster against the home rule effort.

The Senate has voted for district home rule plans six times in recent years only to have them rejected or nullified by the House.

Unusual Test

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill., joined Mansfield and Morse in the unusual parliamentary test.

If the Senate fails to limit debate on the home rule rider, Mansfield has promised to table and thus kill the proposal for this session.

Mansfield still clings to hope that Congress can adjourn sometime next midweek but House speaker John McCormack, D-Mass., indicates that the following Saturday, Oct. 22, is more realistic.

Senate and House leaders plan to huddle Monday on adjournment schedules. Among other things some 25 bills, awaiting Senate-House compromises which must be approved by both ends of Congress, threatened their plans.

Minor Bills

House leaders listed minor bills for Monday action with three disputed pieces of legislation to follow.

First of these is the long controversy over establishing a national park and recreational area in the Indiana dunes. Industrial, recreational and regional conflicts are involved.

Next the House will tackle a bill from its Un-American Activities Committee proposing drastic penalties against "over acts" during a period of hostilities by persons in this country.

It is aimed at Viet Nam war protests and such actions as sending aid to the Viet Cong. Passage, after some angry debate, appeared likely.

Later in the week the House will consider President Johnson's "demonstration cities" proposal which won senate approval in modified form earlier in the session.

It is a major item in the administration's Great Society blueprint and could involve billions of dollars of future federal spending.

Senate action during the week will include a $386.5 billion military construction fund and annual appropriations for the State, Justice and Commerce Department and the District of Columbia.

The Senate appropriations committee cut more than $2 million from military construction funds approved by the House. It has yet to act on the $2.3 billion fund for

State, Commerce and Justice or the $381 billion for the district allowed by the House.

Also listed for Senate action are two House-passed tax measures. One would suspend the investment credit for business in an anti-inflation effort. The other would revise foreign investment taxes in an attempt to reduce the gold drain and balance of payments deficit.

The tax-writing Senate Finance Committee has tacked scores of amendments on the second bill.

Two more bills authorizing federal aid for education also are awaiting Senate action.

Police Disarmed By Negro Crowd

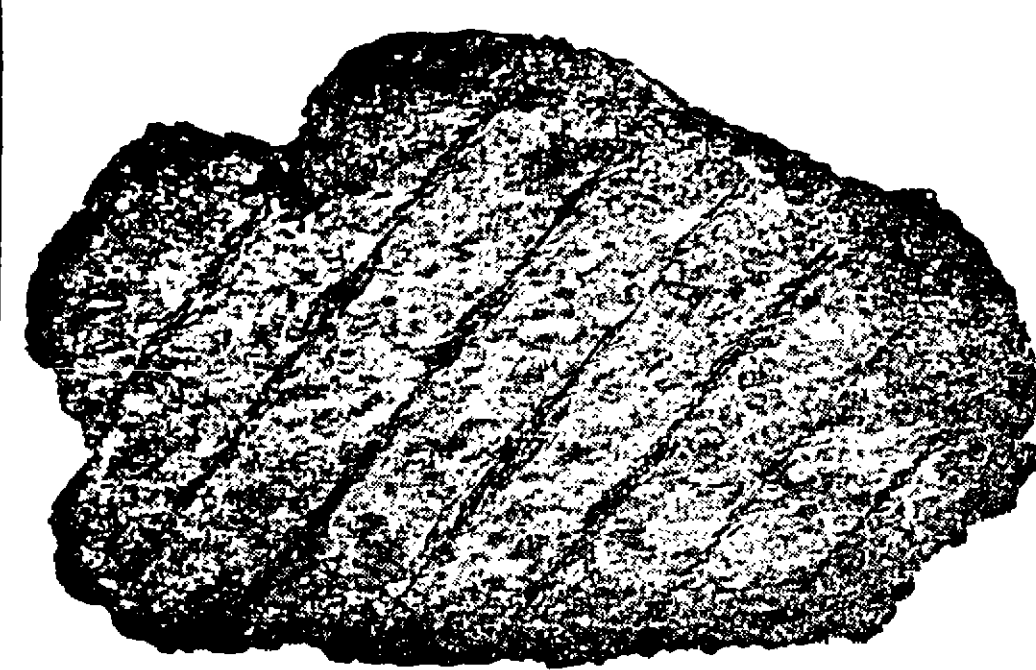

Tampa, Fla. (AP) — A crowd of about 300 Negroes disarmed two police officers early Sunday when they tried to break up a fight between two Negroes brawling on the sidewalk.

Police reinforcements, called by the officers on a walkie-talkie radio before the Negroes took it away, fired shots into the air and the crowd dispersed.

Three Negroes were arrested.

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

People, things, situations—It is generally said of them that change is inevitable, that there is either progression or regression. Such is not true, however, of all things. Specifically, it is not true of the Old Farmer's Almanac, of which we have received a free complimentary copy. Thereby saving the fifty-cent purchase price, it seems only right that this 175th anniversary edition will be properly reviewed.

After all, we would hate to be taken off the advance copy list for failing to review the publication. Additionally, such reviewing is an experience we simply enjoy and would like to share with others. The marvel of The Old Farmer's Almanac is that it remains virtually the same in format and content from year to year. Advertising has been added in recent years but this is its only concession to modern society. It still persists in providing, for instance, a table for planting either above or below the ground crops in accordance with the fullness of the moon.

This, of course, is not its major offering. It prides itself on its weather calendar, prepared again this year by Abe Weatherwise, who reports a highly favorable prediction rate on last year's tables. The coming winter doesn't look good, from Abe's point of view. It might be added that we can remember no almanac in which winter looked any other way.

Almanac readers will groan with Abe's prediction that "December, January, and February will keep ploughs and shovels 'on the run.'" Almost every indication, he reports, points to a higher snowfall this winter than in either of two preceding winters. Add up the total snowfall for Abe's Boston calculations and it comes to 89 inches.

One new thing has been added to the almanac this year. Rather than each area's having to figure its own weather according to distances from Boston, there is a separate prediction for the various areas of the nation. For the Midwestern states, including Nebraska, this is the outlook: "The winter of 1966-67 (November through April) will be one of heavy snow, blizzards, and slightly warmer than the same period a year ago. On the whole, the precipitation given is the normal, as this is expected to be a normal year." Aside from mid-November flurries, the first real snow is scheduled from December 15-17 and again from December 24-26, totaling six inches on each occasion. A 10-inch snow is scheduled for February 22-25 and a blizzard for March 13-16.

In case you are wondering about what to wear on next Easter Sunday, don't be too optimistic. The date is March 26, two days after a blizzard and right in the middle of a period of thunderstorms and tornadoes. Of course, Abe advises us to give or take a day or two on things since the predictions are still pretty general, despite their localizing as to broad areas of the nation. But give or take a day around Easter and you still can't come up with anything very promising. Best bet is to hope of Abe misses the mark on this one.

The weather is but a beginning to all that can be found in the 1967 almanac. If you like to live by the stars or signs of the zodiac, there are several pages to help you out on this score. Being a skeptic of such things, we haven't examined the matter in much detail but can guarantee its presence in the book.

In an introductory page, the almanac editor makes one other concession to the times. "As our title implies," he writes, "this almanac is edited for farmers." As the number of profitable farms has shrunk from some 20 million to around one million, we have included in our definition of "farmer" everyone who has a garden, livestock, or even a lawn—as well as city folk who, although deprived of farm surroundings, still love the farm and all it stands for.

From an economic point of view, that seems like a wide concession to the times.

And after all, the almanac information, for the most part, should be of equal interest to all. Who knows, for instance, when he might need some good advice for treatment of a frozen nose, ear or finger? The almanac tells us to rub the frozen part of the body with snow or bathe it in cold water. Seems we remember this from our own childhood and that it was once even successfully applied to us. If still not interested, how about an accounting of the great Chicago fire of 1871?

On page 66 you can find the approximate season for alligator hunting in several southern states, as well as seasons for the more conventional fish and game pursuits. Residents of Utah will be unhappy to learn that they are destined in 1967 for a visit from the Seventeen Year Locusts. All in all, it is another welcome success for The Old Farmer's Almanac.

A Step Toward Safety

While the motivating factor may be distasteful, plans of the State Motor Vehicle Department to inaugurate a driver license re-examination and auto inspection program should receive widespread endorsement. The distasteful part is that the plans are an outgrowth of federal threats to cut down highway construction grants to Nebraska as an alternative.

As we have said previously, the federal government is wrong in forcing upon the states programs indirectly related to the aid given. Requirements for receiving aid should cover only those things having to do with the project the aid is to finance. In this case, the construction of highways.

However, the re-examination and inspection program has a lot of merit. While it will cost a substantial sum of money, other states using it have shown a marked decline in their accident and highway death rate. The program could save a number of lives annually and you can put no price tag on this.

The re-examination should weed out those people who are physically incapable of driving a car and we all see them occasionally on the streets and highways. When our reaction time begins to fail us and our sight and hearing slip, it is time for us to lay aside our car keys and employ another means of transportation.

Unfortunately, the re-examination is not likely to get to many of the careless drivers as they will be on their good behavior at the time of re-examination. But perhaps even they will be a little impressed with this new emphasis on safe driving. The program will be presented for adoption to the 1967 Legislature and is highly recommended to all senators. We should not forget that we are still killing more people on our highways than are dying on the field of battle in Viet Nam.

Cracked Up Students

A study of stress and the college student today reveals figures that should startle the average person.

In the 12 months just closing, 90,000 students seriously contemplated suicide, and 1,000 of them went through with it.

A "pressure cooker" emotional atmosphere on today's college campus was described as a strong contributing factor. It is making too many young people emotionally sick.

Meantime, the United States Health Service says that present day college undergraduates are the nation's highest suicide risk group. It adds that 10 per cent of the nation's 6.5 million college students have emotional problems serious enough to warrant professional care.

From whence has this pressure cooker attitude sprung?

Perhaps somewhat from campus pressure. But mostly from the community we call America. We are pushing our young people too far. We have overemphasized the urgency of education. There is too much "do or die" in our approach. And we are beginning to pay the price for it. Too many youngsters are breaking under the strain.

It is true that there is a great deal more to learn than there was 30 years ago. The average college graduate of that time, if he did not remain in the field of his study, would struggle as hard to get through his freshman year now, as he struggled 30 years ago. But the pressure to succeed, which is an emotional pressure, rather than a learning pressure, is greatly more today. And he comes under that intensely before he ever opens a college text. To a student education is always a venture into the unknown, and therefore, difficult. The path should not be cluttered with emotional pressures that need not exist.

Gold And Foreign Trade

Fourteen countries, both rich and poor, have endorsed a new international money unit as a step beyond gold to further international trade. This was preliminary to a future meeting of the International Monetary Fund. While it was a favorable action it was by no means a final and decisive step. It only indicated that the world's nations may get together before the facts of life brings down the structure of international money.

What is the matter is rather simple. There is a certain amount of gold in the world that can be used as international money. It is not sufficient to sustain the constantly increasing amount of business done between the nations. And as trade continues to swell in this era of manufacturing and trade and in the light of new products constantly coming on the market the amount of gold becomes increasingly less adequate. Under such circumstances an answer is offered through devising a new unit of money in sufficient amount to sustain growing trade. Or there are other answers, one of them being to slow down trade to a point that the gold supply will be adequate, or let things go bust. But here human perversity enters.

Each nation is for itself. Europe especially likes gold and continues to build reserves of it at the expense of the supply for trade. It is difficult to think up a satisfactory substitute. So here we stand with a crisis approaching. The past seems to offer no learnable lessons. After World War I France set forth on a policy of building a huge gold reserve. It did not work.

During the depression the United States finally got more than 70 billion of gold reserves. We buried it in Fort Knox and gained little good from it.

It is trade rather than gold that is the prime necessity. This is an obvious fact which is very, very hard to learn.

"It's More Than We've Ever Put Out Before"

DREW PEARSON

Clinton, Tennessee, Sets Right Pattern

WASHINGTON — Eight years ago this week, the people of Clinton, Tenn., were awakened at 3 a.m. by a succession of dynamite blasts, to find their schoolhouse blown apart by a hate bomber.

Strong men wept as they looked down at the shattered walls, the splintered desks, the broken glass, the warped lockers in which children once put their lunch boxes.

But these men began rebuilding. And in one year, with the help of children all over the nation who contributed nickels and dimes to buy bricks to combat bombs of bigotry, a new schoolhouse was underway in Clinton. I have been there since. Hate is forgotten. White and Negro children study together side by side.

The Clinton schoolhouse, it seems to me, can be a lesson to San Francisco, Cicero, Atlanta and other cities where hate and bullets and bloodshed have torn communities asunder. These are bigger cities and their troubles have festered longer, so the rebuilding will be more complicated. But as in Clinton, Tenn., it can be done.

The problem at Clinton was complicated by fear—fear of white bigots. R. G. Crossno, chairman of the school board and a dairyman, had his milk business boycotted. Nevertheless, he led in the decision that the school must obey court rulings.

Leading Tennessee politicians were reluctant eight years ago to serve on a committee to rebuild the school. They were fearful—fearful of white political retaliation.

The problem was also complicated by rabble-rousing John Kasper, a racial pied piper, who came to Clinton to stir up prejudice. It was he who indirectly inspired the midnight bomber.

Today the nation's No. 1 rabble-rouser is a young Jamaican Negro, Stokely Carmichael, whose "black power" slogan has ignited black big-city crowds to demand more, and cause one-time congressional champions to vote for less.

The extremism of John Kasper and Stokely Carmichael, ten years apart, has helped touch off the troubles of 1956-58 and 1965-66.

But when you get away from these rabble-rousers, away from the uneducated and the biased of both races, you find a great reservoir of goodwill. The schoolchildren of California gave up their lunch money to help rebuild the schoolhouse in Tennessee. And I am sure the schoolchildren of Tennessee would help the children of Watts and San Francisco if the problem could be divorced from rabble-rousing and violence.

MARQUIS CHILDS

Ike In Big Switch On Asian War Line

WASHINGTON — Emerging from his retirement, or more accurately semi-retirement, General Eisenhower has been projected into the election campaign. He threw his great weight in the balance of the most inflammatory of all issues—win the Viet Nam war and do not rule out the use of nuclear weapons. The consequences are incalculable not just for election day but for the perilous months beyond as the American commitment constantly grows.

When the general first ran for President in 1952 this country was in a war in Korea. Following the massive Chinese intervention in late 1950 American casualties had gone well over the hundred thousand mark. It was a war unpopular, frustrating, baffling as is the conflict in Viet Nam today.

While Eisenhower, like other candidates for public office, managed at one time or another in the campaign to say almost everything on every side of every question, his principal thrust was as the champion of peace. He sounded often, and particularly in Republican territory in the Midwest, like an old-fashioned isolationist. Here called from the record and contrasting so markedly with what he is saying today are some of his statements as he moved across the country in September and October 1949.

We should be keeping our boys at home and not preparing them to serve in uniforms across the ocean. —Newton, Iowa, Sept. 18. We must take our boys away from the front lines.

—Richmond, Calif., Oct. 8

Now some people have advocated: 'Well, let's go and fight China.' No one yet, no one that I know of, has presented any feasible military plan for attacking China. It is not a country particularly susceptible to weakening through massive bombing, a place where we could presumably have a greater advantage than anywhere else. Because why? It doesn't have the great centers like Gary, Detroit, Pittsburgh, and the great manufacturing centers that we do. It is a great mass of people.

The general's declaration toward the close of the campaign that he would go to Korea was credited as much as any single factor with his landslide victory over Adlai Stevenson. President-elect Eisenhower went to Korea before his inauguration. Not long after becoming president he initiated the moves resulting in the armistice signed July 27, 1953.

Eisenhower's image was established as a man of peace and the Republicans exploited this in later elections with denunciation of the "three Democrat wars" and the arithmetic of the casualties in those wars. In 1954 President Eisenhower rejected a plea by the Joint Chiefs of Staff to intervene in Viet Nam to save the French from defeat.

EMPEDOCLES

Profiles In Science

Empedocles was born in Sicily about 500 B.C. He was a member of a well-to-do family and was educated and trained to fill a certain position in society—that of a gentleman.

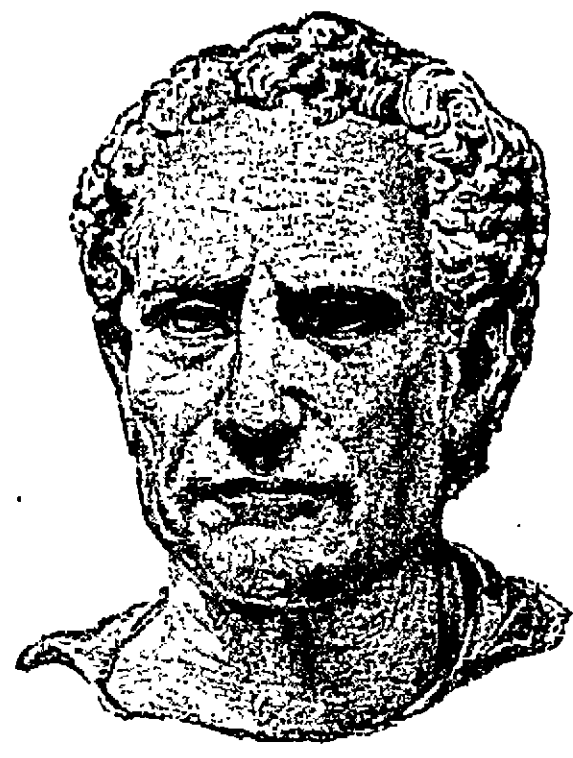

The Greeks of Sicily were so struck by his proud bearing, his knowledge and wisdom, that they asked him to rule them as their king. He refused gently, advising them to shun dictatorships and to put their trust in democracy.

Empedocles was one of the first advocates of what we know today as the "theory of evolution."

He divided everything in the world into four elements—water, fire, earth and air—believing that they had arranged themselves either inadvertently or with the aid of a prime mover into all the things we know today. However, these arrangements did not happen all at once.

Everything that exists is the product of something that existed before and is the result of the four elements working upon each other. These changes go on in a universal rhythm never stopping and never slowing down but going inexorably forward.

According to Empedocles' concept, first there was a phase of evolution succeeded by a phase of dissolution. There is disagreement with this theory but most thinkers accept the idea that things are always growing in ways that are considered beneficial by some standards and harmful by others.

Empedocles believed that all living and inorganic things are assemblies of atoms. To explain why these arrangements are constantly being built and torn down, he apparently used love and hate, imputing them to things that feel no emotions. Upon analysis this is not so foolish as it sounds.

For instance, Empedocles' ideas that atoms could love and hate have been interpreted to mean that they feel "at home" in some situations and "uncomfortable" in others.

★ ★ ★ This in turn is resolved to the idea that when things

find themselves in beneficial or comfortable surroundings they tend to survive, strengthen and develop; whereas things in unfavorable surroundings tend to get weaker and disappear. Combinations of atoms that suit each other last while unsuited ones die.

This explains evolution almost as well as Darwin's "survival of the fittest." We know that thousands of mutations are caused by cosmic rays and other radiation but that only a few survive. The reason the others do not is that they are unworkable and "unfit."

NASON ON EDUCATION

Leisure Use Also Requires Education

By DR. LESLIE J. NASON

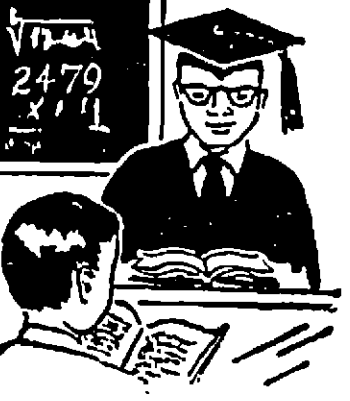

Should we be educated on how to enjoy our leisure time? Most definitely—yes!

Persons who lack the skills to fit successfully into the work world usually also lack the skills which would propel them into interesting and worthwhile leisure activities.

Automation and technical advances often force leisure upon those who are least prepared to make good use of it and to enjoy it.

Our old ideas of leisure-time activities must be revised. We need more than time to read or to play. One must have a desire to read about something and to add to his knowledge. Even reading just to enjoy a clever use of words demands a rather specialized background and experience in word usage.

★ ★ ★ In pioneer days, hunting and fishing were available to the entire population if they so desired. The undeveloped areas were wide expanses in comparison to the populated ones. Now this is rapidly being reversed. The world is becoming a crowded planet.

Music, painting, sculpture and poetry have always been leisure-time activities of those skilled in these arts and able to afford them.

To successfully use leisure time, every individual must learn to live happily with himself. Parents and schools must help children develop into men and women interested in, and capable of, self-development coupled with a desire to be of service to family and community. Ideally, they should be able to read with sufficient ease to make some use of this avenue for increasing their knowledge and enjoyment.

They should have been exposed and have learned to appreciate and enjoy listening to music. Producing music on their own could be a leisure activity for many more individuals.

★ ★ ★ In educating people for the worthy use of increased leisure, the idea of the joy to be gained through helping others should be stressed.

For example, the mother who devises a new menu for the pleasure of the family, revises some portion of the home, or does any one of the many things that mothers do to make life in the home more pleasant, is making a worthy use of leisure time. She gets satisfaction from these activities.

One has but to help one underachieving child to become an achiever to understand the joy that he, himself, receives out of this most worthy use of leisure time.

As people strive to learn; and as they aspire to live in a better house on a better street, and to give their children a better heritage, their leisure activities must be constructive.

Abel Fire

Lincoln, Neb.

Please give Abel a chance to prove itself. The Page One article in the Oct. 3 Star was a gross misrepresentation of Sunday night's fire.

Here are the facts: (1) a fire was spotted in the trash chutes; (2) a group of responsible students turned in the alarm; (3) the alarm was verified and by the time the evacuation order was given, there was no doubt in anyone's mind that the fire was real. Evacuation of the building was orderly—there was absolutely no sign of panic among the residents. Furthermore, realizing that it was real, there was several students who without being told took it upon themselves to make sure that everybody in every room had cleared the premises. After this was done, then and only then did these students leave.

After all the residents were out of the building, they gathered in groups, talked, sang, and, yes, even cheered. In effect, they did just about anything they could think of to keep themselves occupied without causing trouble.

As for The Star's mention of a "raid" on the nearby women's dorm—it must be granted that many of the residents did head for Sandoz Hall and upon their arrival, they went into the lobby and watched television.

THE SPICE

of life in the suburban areas is activity

The past two weekends attest to the fact that Lincoln residents are loved for themselves — not for the Cornhusker football squad. Even though the Huskers haven't been at home for two weeks, houseguests and visitors have filled suburban homes.

WEDGEWOOD MANOR

A dinner party Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Shephard was given in honor of Joseph Bosch of Washington, D.C. Mr. Bosch was the Shephard's houseguest last week. Six neighborhood couples were invited to the affair.

No one threw stones but the six Colorado College rooters weren't very popular at the Wesleyan football game Friday night. The alumni attending were Mr. and Mrs. Allan Ives, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mienthka and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kirk.

After the Wesleyan victory the sixsome returned to the Kirk home for a post-game seminar.

En route to their home in Denver, from a Chicago business meeting Mr. and Mrs. Tim Evenson made a weekend stop in Lincoln Saturday and Sunday. During their brief stay they were the houseguests of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Johnson.

EASTMONT

The population of the Donald Hamilton home exploded with seven additional members Sunday afternoon when Young Kim Hamilton celebrated her 11th birthday. Kim and her feminine friends spent the anniversary hours in a treasure hunt, plus the traditional cake and ice cream.

Guests were Beth Ballew, Mikey Tuck, Prissy Hicks, Nancy Smock, Wendy Mayfield, Jody Ebers and Terri Rose.

THE KNOLLS

Mrs. Kaer P. Vanice III is planning a Wednesday luncheon at the Lincoln Country Club this week. Mrs. Vanice will entertain her bridge group in honor of a Lincoln visitor, Mrs. Fred Johnston of Denver, Colo.

LINCOLN HEIGHTS

Tuesday morning Mrs. Kenneth Niedan entertained at her home to introduce politics into the usual social activities. Guest speaker for the coffee was Mrs. Carol Walker who is running for county office in November.

EASTBOROUGH

We don't know what Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Schamp had on the agenda for this weekend, but activity at the Schamp home during the past two weekends has been phenomenal.

The last week in September, Mr. and Mrs. Schamp flew to Las Vegas, Nev., to visit with Mr. and Mrs. Donald Schamp, and their children, Doug, Greg and Susie.

When the Lincoln travelers arrived home last weekend they were met by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Schamp, Jr. and their two sons, Dennis and Dwayne, of Oak Harbor, Wash. The junior Schamps were in Lincoln visiting friends and relatives before departing for a Naval station in Hawaii.

After visiting in Lincoln, Mr. and Mrs. Schamp Jr. will make visits in Las Vegas and Long Beach, Calif.

NORTHEAST HEIGHTS

Arriving Friday night to be the weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Graesser and their daughters, Marie, Louise and Gwen, were Mrs. Graesser's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Offutt of Liberty, Mo. Mr. and Mrs. Offutt, incidentally, are observing their 58th wedding anniversary this evening at a family celebration.

SUNDAY

party complimented bride-elect

One of the festive Sunday afternoon affairs was the party and miscellaneous shower for which Miss Nancy Cowles was hostess at her home when she paid courtesy to Miss Nancy Baker. The party yesterday was the first in what probably will be a long list of courtesies for Miss Baker whose marriage to David Koch will take place on Dec. 17. But Miss Cowles made her plans especially early because she leaves on Tuesday for her Peace Corps assignment in Chile.

Betrothal Revealed

Maj. and Mrs. Jack Watson of Scott Air Force Base, O'Fallon, Ill., formerly of the Lincoln Air Force Base, have announced the betrothal of their daughter, Margaret Lynn, to Gary Lee Tracy of New York City.

The wedding will be an event of Dec. 17, and the ceremony will be solemnized in the base chapel at Scott Air Force Base. The bride-elect attended Lincoln schools and is a former student at Robert Morris Junior College, Carthage, Ill. Her fiancé serves as a laboratory technician at Scott Air Force Base Hospital.

The bidding:
1♥ South West North East
1♥ Pass Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead — king of spades.

This hand was dealt many years ago in a rubber bridge game. There is no record of the participants in the deal, but, even if there were, it is doubtful that the victims of the holocaust would relish the publicity.

South was apparently a believer in light opening bids, but, even so, he might have considered it more expedient to open with a club than a heart.

But he did bid a heart, which West doubled. East made an inspired pass, thus converting the takeout double into a business double.

Not only the bidding, but also the play, was inspired. West, with no clearly indicated opening lead, ventured the king of spades. East applauded the lead by signaling with the nine, and West continued with a spade to the ace.

Bidding his time, East returned a diamond rather than a spade. He was out to kill declarer and he decided that the best weapon for this purpose was a diamond return.

South erred by playing low and West took the trick with the king. West returned a diamond which East ruffed.

East led back the seven of spades, which South ruffed with the six and West over-ruffed with the nine. East then trumped the diamond return and led another spade, South ruffing with the eight and West with the ten.

Continuing the lethal defense, West played a low club to the king. East returned a club, West taking the trick with the ten and continuing with the ace and another club. Dummy ruffed and East overruffed.

By now eleven tricks had been played and South had lost them all. East had the A-7 of hearts left and led the seven. South, who had the K-J, played the jack, which lost to the queen. The ace of hearts then provided trick number thirteen for the defense. Down 2,000.

The defenders had pitched a shutout!

BRIDE at Sunday ceremony

The candlelight altar of Faith Lutheran Church was decorated with chrysanthemums in shades of gold and bronze for the Sunday, Oct. 9, wedding of Miss Vickie Carol Pettit, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neal W. Pettit, and Ronald Eugene Olson, son of Mrs. Elmer F. Olson, and the late Mr. Olson. The ceremony was solemnized at 2 o'clock by the Rev. Edgar Schmidt.

As the maid of honor, Miss Kathleen Foley wore a floor-length frock in royal blue, fashioned with a velvet basque and slim skirt of satin. She carried a modern arrangement of gold and bronze pompon chrysanthemums centered with a white orchid. Costumed identically were the bridesmaids, Miss Patti Webb and Mrs. Dixie Eye, and the junior bridesmaid, Miss Aloma Bouma.

Jim Bottcher served as best man, and seating the guests were Randy Ware, Scott Pettit, Tracy Pettit, Sterling Gray and Bruce Pierce.

The bride chose a period gown of white Chantilly lace and silk bombazine. Embroidery of pearls and iridescent sequins highlighted the sabrina neckline of the long-sleeved bodice of lace, and the bouffant redingote skirt of silk, parted at the front to reveal an underskirt of lace, was completed by a court train of lace-edged silk tiers. Her illusion veil was held by a coronet of pearls, and she carried a cascade of white orchids and stephanotis.

Upon their return from a wedding trip to Mexico, Mr. and Mrs. Olson will reside in Lincoln.

ABBY

do what is best for you

DEAR ABBY: After eight years of marriage, I decided to get a divorce. I had two children and would have stayed married for their sakes, but their father cared nothing for them, so it would have been pointless. Two years later I married a widower with three children. In six months I realized that I had made another terrible mistake. All he wanted was a cook, housekeeper and someone to raise his children.

He favored HIS children and accused me of favoring mine. (Actually, I bent over backwards so far trying to be fair to his, I was unfair to my own.) My problem is that I am miserable but if I get another divorce everyone will say BOTH divorces were my fault. I am 30 years old and don't want to be a two-time loser. If it weren't for my children, I would commit suicide.

DEAR TRAPPED: The people who talk don't help you to bear the burden of your misery. Do what is best for you and your children and forget everything else.

DEAR ABBY: I was married 10 years ago and now have three children. Two years ago I found my birth certificate and discovered that my mother's maiden name was on it, not her married name, which means she had me before she was married.

This has been bothering me for a long time. I want my children to be legitimate. Are they or aren't they? I don't know who to ask without a lot of embarrassment.

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Your children are legitimate even though YOU may have been born out of wedlock.

OHIO BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: Technically the groom selects whom-ever he wishes for his ushers, but since it has now become an issue, it would be both wise and generous for him to include your brother, knowing that if he doesn't, ill feelings will prevail.

Johnson Faces Demonstrations

... IN NEW ZEALAND

Wellington, New Zealand (AP) — University students plan massive demonstrations in Wellington during President Johnson's visit Oct. 19-20.

A spokesman for the Students' Association at Victoria University, Wellington, was quoted by the Sunday News as saying: "We will picket him everywhere. We will make him aware of our opposition to the war."

The chairman of an organization known as the Committee on Viet Nam, Barry Metcalfe, of Wellington, who organized previous anti-Viet Nam demonstrations, including some during the visit of Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey in February, hinted that strongarm men from his committee will help security agents guard Johnson — unofficially.

"We are certainly going to demonstrate about U.S. policy in Viet Nam, but in an orderly fashion," said Metcalfe. "We will take strong action against anybody who tries to stir up violence."

'Peace Swindle'

Tokyo (AP) — Hanoi's official Viet Nam news agency charged President Johnson's forthcoming trip to Asia is another step to stage a "peace swindle in Asia."

VNA, in a broadcast monitored here, commented on Johnson's forthcoming trip to the Philippines for a seven-nation Viet Nam conference and to four other friendly nations — New Zealand, Australia, Malaysia, Thailand, and South Korea. It said: "Johnson on the one hand claimed that the Manila conference is aimed to discuss prospects for a peaceful solution to the Viet Nam conflict, but on the other dis-

Prosecutors Probing Subandrio's Fund Use

Jakarta, Indonesia (AP) — Prosecutors in the trial of former Foreign Minister Subandrio questioned him and state witnesses in detail Sunday night on the use of $500,000 in state funds.

Subandrio and the others testified the funds were used for the Indonesian central intelligence organization which Subandrio headed. The money was split between two banks, in Zurich and Tokyo, and could be drawn only by Subandrio.

The witnesses and prosecution confirmed, however, that nearly all the funds still are in the government hands.

President Sukarno's name did not come up at all in the testimony, as it has regularly in the previous sessions. Subandrio is being tried on charges of treason, subversion and corruption.

Personal Money

One witness testified he issued checks for Subandrio of $10,000 for each of his trips abroad and none of the money was returned. It was treated as his personal money, the witness said.

Subandrio's trial, already running for a week, is expected to end in a few days.

The testimony thus far has dwelt heavily on Subandrio's connection with the Communist Party and his movements prior to the communist coup attempt last October. The testimony also involved Sukarno, linking him through a

Why Can't You Converse?

A noted publisher in Chicago reports a simple technique of everyday conversation which can pay you real dividends in social and business advancement and works like magic to give you poise, self confidence and greater popularity.

According to this publisher, many people do not realize how much they could influence others simply by what they say and how they say it. Whether in business, at social functions, or even in casual conversations with new acquaintances, there are ways to make a good impression every time you talk.

To acquaint the readers of this paper with the easy-to-follow rules for developing skill in everyday conversation, the publishers have printed full details of their interesting self-training method in a new book, "Adventures in Conversation," which will be mailed free to anyone who requests it. closed that his coming Asian tour has no other aim than to push his war escalation policy in Viet Nam.

"At the press conference Thursday Johnson declared he would make an all round review of the military situation in Viet Nam at the Manila conference, and stressed that the U.S. did not want to 'surrender or withdraw' from Viet Nam and Asia.

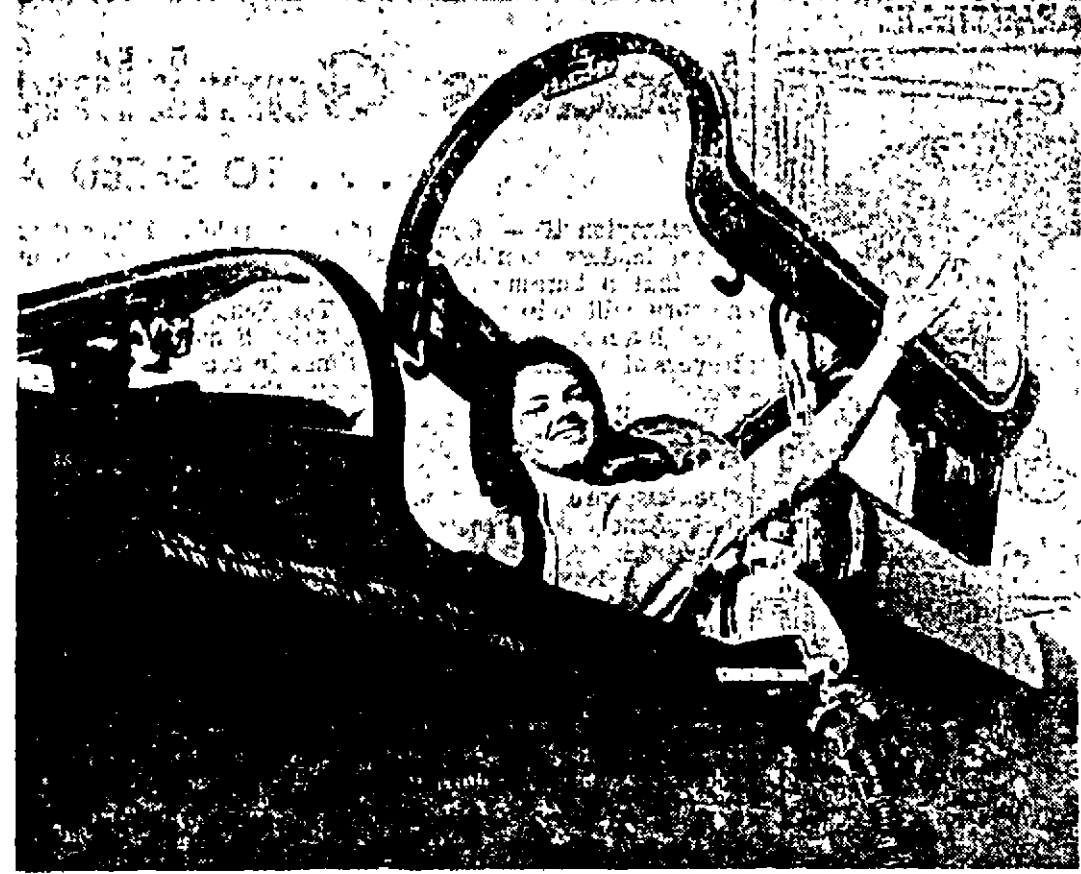

"Meanwhile, as disclosed by New York Times on Oct. 3, U.S. Defense Secretary (Robert S.) McNamara, who was scheduled to arrive in Saigon would examine on the spot the request for dispatching 75,000 more American troops to South Viet Nam in spring 1967 and to bring the Viet Nam war to a turning point in mid-November this year."

Not Political

Casberra, Australia (AP) — Presidential Press Secretary Bill D. Moyers denied there were any political implications involved in President Johnson's forthcoming visit to Australia and New Zealand.

He was speaking at a news conference at the American Embassy following a meeting with Australian government officials on the itinerary for the President's Australian visit. Asked about his reactions to criticisms that Johnson's visit now could help the Australian and New Zealand governments in their approaching election campaigns, Moyers replied:

"There is nothing that a President or prime minister does that does not attract criticism from one quarter or another. The President is not coming to Australia for political purposes, he is making the visit because he has had a long-standing invitation."

Supreme Court May Again Decide Controversial Church-State Issues

Washington (AP) — The Supreme Court may decide Monday to step again into the mined field of church-state relations by taking on a Maryland case of historic proportions.

No stranger to such controversy, the court is being asked to pass on the constitutionality of tax exemptions for houses of worship and church-owned property.

The case has been on the court docket since May 13. A decision on whether to hear it is expected soon, possibly Monday — which is the first decision day of the term which began last Monday.

Public Fund Use

Also on the docket, since Aug. 24, is another landmark church-state suit. This one questions the use of public funds for church-related schools. Again, before long, the justices are expected to decide whether to review.

Together, the two cases give the court a new opportunity to interpret the First Amendment and the separation of church and state, which stems historically from the constitutional declaration that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

In June, 1962 the court stepped into a storm by ruling that the amendment bars state officials from composing an official prayer and requiring its recital in public schools at the beginning of each school day. This involved a New York practice. The storm grew the following June when the court struck down Baltimore, Md., and Pennsylvania provisions that the Bible be read or the Lord's Prayer said the opening of the school day.

Under Criticism

A similar reading of the First Amendment in the cases at hand likely would subject Chief Justice Earl Warren and the eight associate justices to similar criticism.

Madalyn E. Murray O'Hair, who instituted the 1963 Maryland prayer cases, is among those asking the high court to reverse the Maryland Court of Appeals on tax exemptions for houses of worship.

The Maryland court held last Feb. 14 that the exemptions do not violate the Maryland or U.S. Constitutions and said the exemptions are a recognition of the contributions made by religious organizations to the general public welfare.

Among the arguments raised by Mrs. O'Hair and the others are that the exemptions amount to public aid to religious institutions in violation of the First Amendment and result in higher real estate taxes.

Maryland officials have asked the court not to hear the appeal. In papers filed with the tribunal last June, they said:

Maryland Appeal

"Constitutional or statutory tax exemptions for houses of worship and other property of religious organizations exist in every state of the union and in the District of Columbia."

Not one, they said, has ever been set aside as invalid under the U.S. Constitution though the question has been raised from time to time in both state and federal courts.

Besides, the Maryland officials contend, the First Amendment prohibits "active state promotion of religion" not exemptions "to encourage or foster the public good."

In the second case it is the Maryland officials who are seeking high court review.

Here the Maryland Court of Appeals, in a 4-3 decision last June 2, barred state grants to three church-affiliated liberal arts colleges for the construction of science buildings and a dining hall. The court held the colleges

Creighton Volunteers Aid Omaha Youth Programs

Omaha (AP) — State and city officials have enlisted the aid of 13 volunteers from Creighton University in a training program which it is hoped will solve one of the problems facing Omaha War on Poverty youth programs.

The officials have been unable to fill quotas for the men's Job Corps or the city's Neighborhood Youth Corps.

The Creighton volunteers have started a series of courses on how to find unemployed youths and get them interested in applying. The volunteers will go door-to-door in poverty neighborhoods when they complete several weeks of instruction.

The city received a $216,000 grant in August for a Neighborhood Youth Corps. Officials have been able to fill 40 of 100 openings.

The city also has been hard-

Omaha Job Corps Costs $560 A Girl

Omaha (AP) — The director of logistics and administration at the Omaha Women's Job Corps Center, Victor Scodius, says the Burroughs Corporation is spending $560 a month for each girl at the center.

He said it is hoped the figure will be lowered to $450 within a year.

He said the figure covers such items as food, education, clothing, medical and dental treatment and recreation. It does not include such one-time costs as building remodeling.

Transportation and other expenses before the girls arrive and after they leave Omaha are borne by the Office of Economic Opportunity. Scodius said he could not estimate how much O-E-O spends per girl.

After O-E-O officials testified that costs in the last year exceeded $9,000 per enrollee, Congress recently set a maximum of $7,500 per Job Corps enrollee.

Scodius said Omaha's 12-month cost is $6,720 but the average girl stays only from eight to 10 months. He said Burroughs hopes the stay will be cut to six or eight months.

He said the center, which opened in June of 1965, has had 219 graduates, has 420 enrolled now and has had about 200 come and go without graduating.

North Omaha Jobless Are Still Problem

Omaha (AP) — The executive secretary of the Near North YMCA, Sam Cornelius, says there still are many persons aged 19 to 30 unemployed in North Omaha.

He said many are married and have families to provide for, and others are going to school and need part-time jobs.

Cornelius said he has been told by state and city officials that 350 persons have been given jobs since July. He said he "would like to look at the placement percentage, not the referral percentage, and added he asked for a list of the 350 persons but has not received one."

Cornelius said he knew of several who were sent to jobs but were turned away, with no reason given.

Russell Hand, manager of the Omaha office of the Nebraska Division of Employment, said Cornelius' figures were good. Hand said the Near North Side is a problem area and his office has been working with school officials and other agencies.

Hand said he had no knowledge of Cornelius asking for a list of persons given jobs.

POSTCARD

Every night a couple of hundred tourists sit down at medieval wooden tables in the torchlit hall of Bunratty Castle and live the life of a lord.

Lords lived very high on the hog. They lived on "braune brose" and "sew lom-barde." On "salomene" and "che-kyn's in Browet" and "syllabubs" and "trayne roste."

The medieval dinner at Bunratty has become a very big thing since the old, crumbling castle was restored. And everybody comes to eat with their fingers. And drink mead from a posset cup. And hear Irish laments on an Irish harp.

Bunratty Castle stands on the Ennis-Limerick road near Shannon Airport. The Vikings fortified the place. The Norman, Thomas de Clare, had an O'Brien "pulled asunder by strong steeds" in the courtyard.

The O'Briens wound up living in. (And burnt a pair of McNamara's hare to teach them a lesson.)

The floors have fallen in. But the great tower with the arrow slits stood firm. So they rebuilt the inside the way it used to be.

The dinners are of olden days. You eat with your fingers and cut with a dagger and drink your soup from the bowl.

Lovely serving wenches fill your cup with mulled wine. "It's been a great success," said Brendan O'Regan—he lives down here and was the one who rebuilt Bunratty at no profit but for the love of it.

The land is filled with these tower castles. Filled with history of bloodshed and murder, treachery and conquest.

I went over to Pogue Castle at Na Pogue—"the Hill of the Kiss."

"We can't restore them all," said Brendan. "But it was my thought to restore this enough to have a museum here."

He has a very funny idea. "It occurred to me," said Brendan, "to fix up one room the tourists would be pecking into accidentally like, it would be completely in the period. And in it would be a woman of the time, playing a harp."

"When the tourists went back to the bus, they'd mention it. And all the bus drivers —(being in on it, you see)—would cross themselves religiously and swear there was no one in the castle at all.

"It would give the tourists a turn and something to talk about," said Brendan. "Though I don't suppose we could do it." (Brendan is filled with conscience.)

In the great hall in Bunratty, we sat on benches and beat approval with our posset cups on the plank tables. From the diners each night, they choose a lord and lady of the castle.

They also choose one humorous victim to be thrown in the actual dungeon for mock crimes—"trying to eat with a fork, milord."

"One night," said Brendan, "we tried to put in a Dane—a Danish pastry cook from Limerick. He was so caught up in the occasion, he fought them. 'No Irishman can put a Dane in prison!' he cried. For the Danish Vikings were here at one time, you see. So we had to let him go."

"Sometimes I think myself there are strange powers here," said Brendan O'Regan.

"There was the night Judge Gleason—(he was a judge hereabouts and a scholarly man)—recited a poem for the dinner. It was well done. About what it was like here in the old days. When he was through there was thunderous applause."

"And the one who was acting lord of the castle stood up. And he said, 'I thank you, Judge, for all of us. I've never heard anything more impressive. And if I had the power—and I have extraordinary powers tonight, I name you poet laureate of Ireland!'"

"And the Judge laid his head down. 'He's sick,' someone said. And we carried him out, and he died on the drawbridge. I tried to give him 'the kiss of life,' for I didn't know what else to do. But he died."

"Inside the hall," said Brendan, "the acting Lord rose and said: 'We hope it will be all right with our friend. But I'll ask you all to stand a moment in silent prayer for him.' And as they stood and prayed, he died."

Science Shrinks Piles New Way Without Surgery Stops Itch—Relieves Pain

New York, N.Y. (Special) — For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids, stop itching, and relieve pain—without surgery.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by a doctor's observations. Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place. And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where a doctor's observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such astonishing statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®) — the discovery of a world-famous research institution. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H®. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug counters.

301 Would Prohibit State Property Tax

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Constitutional Amendment 301, proposed by initiative petitions sponsored by the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation, would prohibit the state from levying a property tax.

The amendment would, in effect, repeal the Duis Amendment which now bars the state from the property tax field only upon the adoption of a general sales or income tax, or a combination of the two.

If the proposal is adopted by the voters, it would force the 1967 Legislature to use either a general sales tax, an income tax, or both, to support state government operations.

Current state property tax levy is 10.67 mills.

The 99 years of the property tax has funded operations of state government for Nebraska's 99 years of statehood. It now raises some $46 million in annual state revenue.

Proponents of the amendment argue that property carries more than its share of the tax load by supporting state, county, city and school district operations.

A broadening of the tax base — utilizing a sales or income tax to support state government, combined with the possibility of a program of state aid to education which would reduce the local school district property tax levy — would be more fair to all taxpayers, it is contended.

Opponents of the measure argue against placing a flat prohibition against a state property tax in the constitution, thus forever (or until the constitution were again amended; limiting legislative tax alternatives.

Opposition is also expressed to completely removing the state from direct interest in property tax equalization problems.

86,000 Signers

Petitions to place the issue on the ballot were circulated by 2,653 volunteers in 88 of Nebraska's 93 counties. Some 86,785 valid signatures, 29,000 more than required, were gathered.

The Farm Bureau received active support in the drive from the Nebraska Grange, the Nebraska Farmers Union, the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Assn., the Nebraska Wheat Growers Assn., and the Nebraska Stockgrowers Assn.

Nebraskans for Fair Taxation, the organization formed to support the 1965 state income tax law, also endorsed the petition effort.

The amendment's specific minimum percentage for state aid to education has also attracted criticism from those who argue that specific figures do not belong in the constitution where they limit future legislative alternatives.

Supporters of the proposal include the Nebraska State Education Assn., the Nebraska Congress of Parents and Teachers, the State School Boards Assn., and the State AFL-CIO.

Republican gubernatorial nominee Norbert Tiemann opposes the amendment; his opponent, Democratic Lt. Gov. Philip Sorensen, supports it. The measure won 34-12 approval from the 1965 Legislature.

School Aid Requirement, Duis Change Sought

Constitutional Amendment 14, proposed by the Legislature, would tie a program of state aid to education to a broadened state tax base and modify the Duis Amendment adopted by the electorate in 1954.

The proposed amendment provides that, when a general sales or income tax, or a combination of the two, is enacted:

—The state be permitted to levy a property tax only to raise funds to finance capital building improvements.

—At least 20% of the proceeds from the broadened tax base be allocated to the common schools.

The Duis Amendment now provides that once a sales or income tax is adopted, the state would be prohibited from levying any property tax.

3.4 Mills Now

Some 3.4 mills of the current (1966) state property tax levy of 10.67 mills is used to finance capital building improvements. Thus, if Amendment 14 were now in effect, the state would be limited to a property tax of 3.4 mills.

Proponents of the proposed amendment stress the need for property tax relief at the local level, particularly in Nebraska's school districts.

Use of broadened tax base revenue for school support would permit local school districts to reduce their property tax levies, it is argued. That reduction in property tax would come in addition to a near 70% cut in the state property levy.

Continued State Interest

Retention of a state property tax for capital construction would permit the state to balance its tax program further and assure continued state interest in property tax assessment and equalization, proponents contend.

Opponents generally argue that the Duis Amendment should be retained in order

Two proposed amendments to the state constitution are among the three major tax proposals which dominate special issues on the November 8 general election ballot.

The constitutional amendments appear to conflict with one another, at least in part, so that both could not become fully operative even if each received a favorable vote next month.

The constitution provides that, in the event conflicting amendments are approved, the one receiving the highest number of affirmative votes would become effective "as to all conflicting provisions."

Amendment 301 would prohibit the state from levying a

East Germany's 17th Anniversary Celebration Quiet

Berlin (AP) — East Germany, largely unrecognized throughout the non-communist world, marked its 17th anniversary with music, parades and wreath-laying ceremonies.

The East German news agency, ADN, said a performance of a Russian army orchestra and a mailman's footrace were included in the celebrations. In East Berlin, Prime Minister Willi Stoph and leading Communist Party members placed wreaths at the monument to socialism.

The low-key observance was in sharp contrast to the official celebration staged last Aug. 13 on the fifth anniversary of the Communist built wall dividing the city.

Four Services Given Fixed Quota Of Low Test Scorers

Washington (AP) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has assigned the military services fixed quotas of men they must enlist from among the lowest mental category acceptable for duty by law.

McNamara, it was learned, issued a memorandum effective Oct. 1 setting the Navy and Air Force shares at 15% of the numbers of men each signs up during a three-month period. The Marine quota was put at 18%, the Army's 25%.

The move is related to the defense chief's program of bringing into the armed forces up to 100,000 men a year who would otherwise be rejected for service because of mental or physical deficiencies.

Easing Tests

A step in that direction was a recent easing of mental test standards which men must meet in order to be drafted.

Since the Army currently is the only service using the draft, something had to be done to prevent it from getting a disproportionate share of rejects and carrying perhaps too heavy a remedial training burden.

So McNamara established the quotas — the first since the late 1950s, "to assure an equitable distribution" of less intelligent types.

These men, classed in a marginal group referred to as Mental Category Four, have posted scores of 10 to 30 on the Armed Forces Qualification Test. Men who score below 10 — Category Five — are legally exempt from duty.

Traditionally, the Navy and Air Force wind up with the pick of the nation's young men, particularly when draft calls run high — as they have — and many individuals enlist in them to avoid ground combat in the Army.

Category Four Dip

But the Navy and Air Force, as well as the Marines, have dipped into Category Four to some extent in recent years when necessary to meet recruiting goals.

McNamara's quota setup is not unprecedented. In Korea, when Selective Service had to scrape the bottom of the manpower pool, the services were told that 27% of the men they recruited had to come from the Category Four. Again, this was to avoid a situation where the Army was loaded up with the lesser educated men — or, as the Pentagon describes them, men whose test scores "indicate insufficient aptitude to assimilate the caliber of training required."

Based on enlistment quotas for this quarter—October, November and December — the Air Force will enlist about 4,500 from category four; the Navy 3,200 and the Marines 2,250. The Army's 25% quota is meaningless, a spokesman said, since the Army will take whatever numbers are provided by the draft.

Under the latest downward revision in draft standards an individual must score at least 10 on the Armed Forces qualification Test, plus score 90 on two of seven aptitude tests he receives. A score of 10 means he rates in the upper 90% of the population.

Technical Test Out

Previously an individual scoring as low as 10 had to make high grades in three aptitude areas, including a general technical test, to be drafted. The general technical requirement has been dropped.

McNamara told the services if they were unable to meet their quotas of Category Four individuals, any deficit during a calendar quarter would be filled by draftees.

A spokesman said the same catch-up provision was in effect during the Korean War but never had to be used because each service met its quota.

Both the Army and Marines have, for some time, had special companies to provide any additional training required for slow-progressing trainees.

The Navy also has established a remedial training program.

The Air Force has no classes especially designed for slow learners, a Pentagon spokesman said, and does not foresee the need for any.

The Air Force said that, even with a fixed quota of individuals who score low on the intelligence tests, it expects over 90% of its new men will be high school graduates.

Although draft standards have recently been eased, enlistment standards for volunteers remain the same, for the present, the Pentagon said. These standards vary somewhat among the four services, and are based on whether a man is a high school graduate, and how he scores on AFQT and aptitude tests.

Bunche's Daughter Dies In Plunge From Building

New York (AP) — Mrs. Burton (Jane) Pierce, daughter of Ralph J. Bunche, Nobel Peace Prize winner and U.S. undersecretary of the United Nations, died early Sunday when she fell or jumped from her Bronx apartment residence, police reported. She was 33.

Bunche said he and his wife were notified of their daughter's death by police at 2:10 a.m.

"It came as a great shock," he said. "I know my daughter was not ill or anything like that. We just don't know what happened. All I know is she is gone."

Mrs. Pierce's death was discovered when her husband, Burton, returned home from a night football game and found his wife missing. He awakened their older daughter, Karen, 9, who told him she thought her mother was visiting friends.

It was then that the superintendent of the building in which the family lives reported that he had found the woman's body, fully clothed, in a courtyard.

It was not known from what height she fell. The Pierce apartment is on the first floor of the nine-story building.

No notes were found, police said.

The PIERCES were married in September, 1956, and have three children, Nina, 4, John, 7, and Karen.

Bunche said police told him his daughter's fall was "probably from the roof."

An autopsy revealed the cause of death as multiple fractures and hemorrhage apparently resulting from "a fall from a good height."

Security Council Moves To Keep U-Thant For Full Five-Year Term

United Nations (AP) — A move was afoot Sunday for action in the U.N. Security Council Oct. 27 to keep U-Thant on as secretary-general for another five years. Council members were hopeful he would take a full new term.

Diplomatic sources said Lord Caradon of Britain, president of the council this month, had suggested to the other 14 members that it meet Oct. 27 to discuss the secretary-generalship and they probably will agree in consultations now going on.

The secretary-general is chosen by the 119-nation General Assembly on recommendations of the Security Council. Both must act by Nov. 3 because Thant's present five-year term runs out that day.

Thant, a Burmese, announced on Sept. 1 that, for personal, official and political reasons, he had decided not to offer himself for a second term.

Consider Staying

He said on Sept. 19 that if the council and the U.N. membership had not found a successor in the next few weeks, he would consider staying on to the end of the assembly session, Dec. 20, or the end of the year.

Thant's term is certain to be extended to one of those two dates unless he agrees to take a new term. In that case he can probably get any length he wants—from one or two years up to the customary five.

After a private meeting Sept. 29, the council announced it had reached a consensus "that if U-Thant should express willingness to serve another term as the secretary-general, it would fully meet the desires of the members of this council." A spokesman then said Thant would "give the matter careful consideration."

But Thant has not yet given the council a definite reply. In view of that, no one is yet being considered seriously to succeed him. Council members generally feel that in the end he will take a new five-year term.

'Feeling In Bones'

"I think they almost all feel that way," said a member of one council delegation. "Everybody has a sort of feeling in his bones that he will stay," declared another.

One acknowledged that there are not many facts to base the supposition on. That is one reason why many State Department officials, as distinct from U.S. delegation people, think Thant will leave.

He has been under growing pressure to stay ever since last spring. The climax came Friday when President Johnson called on Thant in his office and, as the President announced later, told him Americans felt "that in this hour of great trial we needed him all the more."

The pressure has been building as speaker after speaker in the assembly's general debate appealed to Thant to agree to a new term. He already had endorsements from President Charles de Gaulle of France, Prime Ministers Harold Wilson of Britain and Alexei N. Kosygin of the Soviet Union and nearly all U.N. regional groups.

Ghana Initiates Proceedings Against Exiled Ex-President

Accra, Ghana (AP) — The government announced Sunday it will start criminal proceedings against former president Kwame Nkrumah on the recommendation of an inquiry which alleged that Nkrumah used a government company as a clearing house for bribes.

Nkrumah, 57, is in exile in Guinea. He was overthrown by an army coup last February.

The three-man board of inquiry, headed by Supreme Court Judge Samuel Azu Crabbe, recommended that Nkrumah's confidante, Emmanuel Ayeh-Kumi and 11 other persons also be tried.

One of those named was William Hall, former governor of Ghana's central bank and a former ambassador to Washington.

The inquiry said that Nkrumah was "the only apparent owner" of the National Development Company (NADECO) and that its accounts were manipulated to defraud its revenue and "to conceal the corrupt dealings"

SEN. KENNEDY . . . surrounded at Des Moines Hotel.

RFK Reiterates Stand On Candidacy

Washington (AP) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., said Sunday he will run for reelection in 1970.

He again said he will not be a candidate for president or vice-president in 1968. In addition to speculation about his 1968 plans, there has been some conjecture Kennedy might run for governor of New York in 1970 rather than for a second Senate term.

Kennedy, on the Mutual Radio program "Reporters Roundup," added, "I am interested in foreign affairs and I intend to remain in the United States Senate as long as the people of New York will return me to office."

The senator put himself on the same side with 1964 Republican presidential candidate Barry Goldwater on one issue — atomic weapons in North Viet Nam.

Kennedy quoted Goldwater as saying atomic weapons would not be helpful in North Viet Nam because there were not suitable targets, then said:

"I don't want to side with Sen. Goldwater against (former) President (Dwight D.) Eisenhower — but I think that in my judgment it is a wiser position than the one that was suggested by President Eisenhower."

Iowans Swarm Bobby On Barnstorming Tour

Des Moines (UPI) — The magic Kennedy charm was on display in Iowa Sunday.

Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-New York, was greeted by thousands of persons—including throngs of screaming girls chanting "We want Bobby" — as he barnstormed Iowa in for Democratic candidacies.

A stiff north wind blowing his shock of wavy hair, Kennedy scribbled hundreds of autographs on scraps of paper and campaign posters, shook countless hands and was mobbed by the crowds.

Greeted At Theater

Kennedy spent Saturday night at Sioux City, and started a four-city Iowa tour there Sunday morning. He received an enthusiastic welcome at a packed Sioux City theater as he criticized Republicans and lauded Democratic candidacies.

Kennedy attended 8:30 a.m. mass at St. Jean the Baptist Catholic Church in Sioux City, then began his tour with a reception and a Democratic rally.

Large crowds greeted Kennedy everywhere he went in Sioux City.

20-Minute Reception

A crowd of about 2,500 gave Kennedy a wild 20-minute reception at the Des Moines airport. He was jostled about as he milled through the crowd. About half of the airport crowd was girls and they surged about Kennedy.

At a speech at a downtown hotel (the Fort Des Moines), Kennedy criticized Republicans in Congress for opposing medicare, federal aid to education and the feed grains program.

"The Republicans now praise these programs," he said. "Where were they when the education bill was before Congress? They voted almost 3-1 against it."

Kennedy said Democrats "did something. We may not always have been right—but we did something."

Malawi Takes Census

Blantyre, Malawi (AP) — Provisional figures from the first census since Malawi's independence two years ago gave its population as 4,042,412. More than 7,000 of the central African country's people are Europeans. Malawi is the former British protectorate of Nyasaland.
